Election Race In Exciting Home Stretch

(From Times' News Services)

Political leaders and followers of all party stripes and colors are charging down the home stretch in the election race with the finishing line, the polling booths, next Monday, only five days away and the purse, control of Canada's government.

Here is how the running looked today:

'NO ORDERS'—ST. LAURENT

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent says he did no wrong in asking the armed forces to vote Liberal on June 10.

But even if he had, he would continue as an "unrepentant sinner" until voting day urging all Canadians to support Liberal candidates if they feel such support would be good for the country.

The Liberal leader, launching his final appeal for Ontario's vote, replied Tuesday to John Diefenbaker's criticism of his armed forces vote appeal letter at two rallies at Brockville and St. Catharines.

Mr. St. Laurent said he had invited—not ordered—service men to vote for the Liberals. He had read of Mr. Diefenbaker's statements with "great horror." He had done no wrong.

"To have anyone say that the letter amounted to ordering the armed forces to vote Liberal must be quite as repugnant to the members of the armed forces as it would be to any other citizen," Mr. St. Laurent said.

The prime minister winds up his Ontario tour with a monster rally in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Friday evening.

Mr. St. Laurent spoke at Brockville before an outdoor crowd of more than 400 at noon. At the night rally in St. Catharines where a crowd of about 1,000 filled the high school auditorium, Mr. St. Laurent launched into an extemporaneous address on Canada's history and economic future, the need for land reform and military strength.

Mr. Diefenbaker, he said, had described himself as a pessimist. He was being aided in his Ontario campaign by Premier Frost. But a booklet issued by the Frost government had tended to support the Liberal party's contention that Canada had prospered under a Liberal administration.

The booklet reviewing the 1956 economy said Canada had broken economic records. It was "a pretty good testimonial" to progress which had coincided with a Liberal administration, and that the Frost government in its booklet had stated the pipeline was a good thing for Ontario.

"One clergyman was worth 10 policemen" in maintaining respect for order in any community. "I said that when I was minister of Justice 10 years ago, and I believe it is as true today as it was then," the Prime Minister remarked.

Canada would not sacrifice its wheat surplus on world markets, Mr. St. Laurent said he believed that ultimately the surplus would be sold for the kind of currency which could be used in Canada until then public funds would be used to continue to provide storage subsidies.

'NEW DEAL'—DIEFENBAKER

TROIS RIVIERES, Que. (CP)—Canadians can be assured of a new deal when the Progressive Conservative party takes over from the Liberals, John Diefenbaker declared in his last Quebec campaign address Tuesday night.

His party will reduce taxes, maintain present social security payments and "make sure the provinces and the municipalities get a fair share of the available tax dollar," the Conservative leader said.

Speaking in both French and English, Mr. Diefenbaker appeared before about 3,000 persons in support of Leon Balcer, National president of the Progressive Conservative Association and seeking re-election in Trois Rivières. The speech capped a fast one-day sweep through the Eastern Townships and into this pulp and paper town, from which he left Tuesday night for a last burst of Ontario campaigning.

Mr. Balcer said the Liberals "are trying their best to make some political capital out of the fact that I supported another candidate" at the Ottawa Conservative leadership convention last year. Ottawa Liberals were so accustomed to "taking their orders" from Trade Minister Howe that they were unable to understand freedom to support any candidate followed by "unintended support" for the victor.

The Hon. Jean-Louis Baribeau, Speaker of the Quebec legislative council, also spoke on behalf of Mr. Diefenbaker in another example of Conservative support offered by several members of the Union Nationale party and government. Premier Duplessis has remained neutral in the election.

"Mr. Diefenbaker will be able to do in the federal field what Mr. Duplessis has been doing in Quebec," said Mr. Baribeau.

'MASS HYSTERIA'—LOW

OTTAWA — Social Credit leader Solon Low charged Tuesday night that well-financed "party propaganda factories" have been winning elections by turning out emotional ballyhoo and whipping up "mass hysteria and blind enthusiasm among the voters."

"Tightly organized, well-financed party machines have made themselves almost completely independent of the voters and their wishes," Low said in a national CBC telecast. "These party machines retain huge propaganda factories that turn out vast quantities of ballyhoo, the object of which is to stir the feelings of the people and whip up mass hysteria and blind enthusiasm."

"I suggest you haven't very much to say or do in the circumstances because, unless you are well organized into electoral groups at the grass roots level, the party machine will carry on completely oblivious of the wishes of the voters after election day."

Low said that if a Social Credit government took over in Ottawa it would reduce taxation by raising personal exemptions by 50 per cent to "help our people to meet the high cost of living."

"We would also formulate integrated financial, monetary and taxation policies designed to lower the cost of production and with a view to bringing about early substantial reductions in the cost of living," Low added.

'WIN 30 TO 40'—BENNETT

WINNIPEG — British Columbia Premier W. A. C. Bennett flatly predicted here today that the Social Credit party would emerge from the June 10 federal election with 30 to 40 seats to hold the balance of power in the House of Commons.

This number would be at least double the 15 seats the party held in the last Parliament, but it is a far cry from the sweep Social leaders were trumpeting at the beginning of the campaign. At that time they predicted the party would become the number two group in the Commons, supplanting the Conservatives.

He told a press conference that the Socialists would win some seats in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia and "maybe a few in Ontario."

RUSS HAVE 5 SUPER BOMBS

WASHINGTON (UP)—A nuclear physicist said today there is evidence that the Russians have produced five super-H-bombs similar to the one set off by the United States on March 1, 1954.

Dr. Ralph Lapp, a scientist who worked on the original U.S. atomic bomb, said he got his information on a trip to Japan from which he just returned.

Total A-Bomb Test Ban Favored by Eisenhower

Bulganin Says Reds Ready to Talk Any Disarmament Phase

(From AP and UP Dispatches)

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower said today he would favor "a total and complete ban" on testing of atomic weapons if there could be total disarmament in the nuclear field.

The president also said that he doubted whether the United States ever again will explode one of the great hydrogen bombs for testing purposes. At the same time, he said the U.S. will join in an international agreement to end atomic tests only if that is part of a safeguarded disarmament program to prevent the use of nuclear weapons in any future war.

In response to another question at his press conference, Eisenhower said he welcomes every indication, including the words of Soviet Communist Leader Nikita Khrushchev, pointing to the possibility of achieving a first-step disarmament agreement. He said he never rejects any such hopeful sign until it has been explored to the full.

At almost the same time, Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin told an international conference at Geneva that Russia is prepared to conclude a "general agreement on the whole problem of disarmament," as well as on any of its specific phases.

In an unprecedented personal message read on the opening day of the annual conference of the International Labor Organization, Bulganin repeated previous Russian demands for "peaceful collaboration and friendly relations" among all nations.

Eisenhower did not explain precisely what he meant in saying there probably would be no more tests of the great hydrogen bombs. He did not make clear where he would draw the line in bomb sizes.

London Conference in 6-Day Rest

Atomic Energy Commissioner Willard F. Libby told Congress today that nuclear bomb testing is "a small risk" that must be measured against "the risk of annihilation . . . if we surrendered the weapons." (See Page 2.)

At London the five-power disarmament conference broke up for a six-day recess without deciding on India's demand to enter the talks.

The request from India threatened a sudden East-West split, with Russia supporting it and Britain, France, Canada and the United States opposing it.

Diplomats believe U.S. delegate Harold E. Stassen would be ready to begin presenting the new "American First" step partial disarmament plan next Tuesday.

New Backing Claimed By Civil Servants

Officials of the B.C. Government Employees' Association denied today that their membership is "backing out" of a strike vote scheduled to take place within the next few weeks.

A. C. Bennett, assistant general secretary, told the Times from Vancouver that the situation was the reverse. The association has taken on 200 new members since the strike vote was decided upon May 24, he said.

The only defections have been five professional engineers in the provincial water rights branch, who felt the action was contrary to their ethics.

(Mr. Bennett said he was conferring with the Professional Engineers' Society of B.C. to determine the position of the hundreds of other professional engineers in the government service.)

"The general reaction (to the strike vote) throughout the service has been favorable," Mr. Bennett said.

"The whole thing has gone past the primary consideration of wages and become a matter of principle," he said. The government employees are most concerned about their treatment by the government and lack of bargaining rights.

Mr. Bennett estimates that the strike ballots will go in the mail to the association's close to 11,000 members by the end of next week. Another two weeks will be needed after that to have them returned and counted.

In the meantime, the association has written to Premier Bennett asking for a meeting with the cabinet, and this may come about next week after the federal election is over.

PLANS EXPLAINED

Year-Round Ferry Service To Pt. Angeles

Plans covering a combination passenger and roll-on, roll-off freight vessel to operate between Victoria and Port Angeles are now in the hands of the U.S. Maritime Commission, R. J. Acheson, president of Black Ball Transport Inc., Seattle, said today.

He said immediate approval of the plans would allow construction in time to commence service in the summer of 1958. The company president said financing of the project has been arranged with the help of C. S. Cummins, of Clise & Cummins, Inc., Seattle brokers.

In addition to approval of the Maritime Commission, terminal arrangements at Victoria and Port Angeles will have to be made before service can start, Mr. Acheson said.

The 325-foot ferry would be designed to carry 1,000 passengers and 125 automobiles, and would remain on the Victoria-Port Angeles run on a year-round basis.

Mr. Acheson said the new vessel will make a minimum of one round trip a day between Port Angeles and Victoria during winter months, with four or more trips daily during the tourist season.

In addition to the cross-strait passenger and automobile service, the ship will handle freight between Seattle, Port Townsend, Port Angeles and Victoria. Black Ball's present freight vessel, the Iroquois, would also continue in service between those ports.

Philip F. Spaulding and Associates, furnished the architectural plans for the new vessel which is scheduled to be constructed at Puget Sound Bridge and Dredging Co.

PRAYER FOR TODAY
O thou who art love itself,
Do thou make pure our affection in the home, but keep us from loving father or mother, son or daughter, more than we love Thee. Preserve us from every form of idolatry and help us to worship Thee only,

'HIP PIP, OLD PIP, ELECTRONS TO YOU'

This Secretary Hard to Date But She Sits on Boss' Knee

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Only one thing is needed to live up to the solemn clasp of telephone executives at Ye Olde Empress—and that is an Electronic Secretary of the kind advertised by the B.C. Telephone Company.

Alas, a comprehensive search of all conference rooms failed to disclose a single electronic secretary and I am still wondering what it would be like to have one on one's knee while dictating letters.

However, I did hear of a leading Victoria drug store which has an ES and, clutching a faint straw of hope I telephoned the young lady with the idea of asking her out for a drink and a chat.

A sweet, refined voice answered.
"Good morning," it said.
"This is the electronic secre-

Sweep Winners in B.C. Over $300,000 Richer

Irish immigrant, Mrs. Kathleen Bones of 1762 Carrick Road, Victoria, won $2,100 to day in the Irish sweepstake on England's Epsom Derby.

Top prize of $140,000 went to R. A. Cleator of Vancouver who held a ticket on the winning horse Crepello.

With consolation prizes not yet calculated it is estimated that British Columbians won a total of at least $300,000 in the Irish Sweep.

Mrs. Bones was one of three Victorians to win prizes. The others are 19-year-olds—Leslie

Lowres of West Saanich Road, Keating, and Flo Peacock of 3965 Rainbow, Victoria—who shared the same ticket.

All three rose early and listened with bated breath to a radio commentary on the race, broadcast at 3 p.m. English time.

For a few seconds after the classic started, Mrs. Bones' horse Mystic Prince was among the leaders—and if it had finished first she would have won a top prize of $140,000.

"The excitement was almost too much for me," daintily blus-eyed Mrs. Bones said. "All those big figures were dancing around in my head . . . and then as the race went on, and I listened to all that gabble of names, I realized that Mystic Prince had dropped way behind."

"If I had won the top prize I might have taken a trip home," she said. "As it is, I think we shall use the $2,100 for household necessities, including a washing machine."

Hours of suspense followed the early morning race commentary for Leslie Lowres and Flo Peacock, two "close friends" who shared ticket NHV 26218 under the nom-de-plume "Lucky Us."

Their horse, Master Effort, was not mentioned in the race commentary and did not appear in the later results which were flashed over the wires from Epsom.

If their horse was a non-starter, they will receive a consolation prize of between $56 and $280.

Besides top winner Cleator, Mrs. Annie Hammond, 70-year-old widow, won $56,000 with her ticket on Ballymoss. Also holding a ticket on Ballymoss was Gunter Gahrns, one-time German paratrooper. His ticket was shared by another German immigrant, Werner Philipp.

Two Ontario residents who held Irish sweepstakes tickets worth $140,000 on Crepello were Don Pearson, 21-year-old fibre mill employee from Pickering, Ont., and S. G. Farrow of Toronto.

Lumber Operators Accept 'Truce'

The 157 lumber industry operators on the British Columbia coast announced today they have accepted recommendation of conciliation board chairman Gordon Wismer, Q.C., that the current contract be extended to September 30 with the 32,000-member International Woodworkers of America.

Announcement was made through Forest and Industrial Relations spokesman, John Billings.

The present contract expires June 14. The union has recommended rejection of the conciliation board report and the four-month "truce."

Woodworkers have voted to take a strike vote on the question of a 20 per cent wage increase and other benefits.

"Continuing a contract made in much better times and which was considered fair then, would give this hard-pressed industry some relief from uncertainty, with consequent benefit to everyone concerned," said Billings.

"However, the board has seen fit to recommend a wait and see period, and the operators after examining all these cir-

ECONOMIC SUICIDE

"In the interests of industrial peace as against industrial chaos, in the province's peak payroll industry, the need is clear to support any measure that will keep this province from committing a degree of economic suicide."

"Competitors who already have advantages in a normal market and are giving B.C. coast mills a hard time of it would get a firmer grip on this business if we either raised our costs of operating sharply, or cut off shipments due to a work stoppage."

"The orders they take from us mean less dollars in B.C. pay envelopes," he said.

F.I.R., in making its decision known to the minister of labor today, requested that if a strike vote is taken, that it should be a secret government-supervised vote as provided under the Labor Relations Act.

Through the Hair Clinic Phase

By ELMER WHEELER

The hair tonic bottle and the comb had become Elmer's phobia. My barber was giving me another one; he had a full head of hair. So I gave him up.

Then I decided maybe a visit to one of those advertised hair clinics would solve my problem. I picked out a leading one in town and sneaked into its second-floor office.

Those "before" and "after" ads really got me.

I told the man I wasn't worried much, but I'd been in the building and thought since I had a few minutes, I'd see what he had to say. Then I tried to pretend a lack of interest.

But his every movement interested me. I watched him take a country boy watches a watermelon grow.

He took toothpicks. Put on pieces of cotton. He parted my hair ever so carefully. He treated my hair with great care, almost kindness. He surely showed his appreciation of the hair I had left.

HE PUT the cotton under a microscope. He did many things that looked real scientific to me, sometimes nodding in approval, then again scowling as though he had discovered something with legs on it.

I tried to be bored about the whole thing, little knowing that a year from that day I'd be in

ON THE HUSTINGS

Pensioners Told To Reject Liberals

VANCOUVER (CP)—The executive of the Elder Citizens' Association of B.C., which claims to represent a majority of old age pensioners in the province, called on all recipients of the allowance Tuesday night to vote against the Liberals next Monday.

A resolution passed by the executive at a meeting in Vancouver said "elder citizens in the province and the rest of the country must bitterly resent the proposed $6 monthly pension increase."

The resolution added: "The sum is totally inadequate compared with the present cost of living even for the barest necessities of existence."

It claimed that Immigration Minister Pickersgill had said Hungarian refugees needed a minimum of $3 a day, and held that this proved the Liberal government was aware of what was considered a minimum allowance, while continuing to pay old-age pensioners $40 monthly.

Attorney-General Bonner said Tuesday night Canada should put international aid to less prosperous countries on a "firm, business-like basis for the national and international good and sound diplomatic relations."

Mr. Bonner spoke at a Social Credit campaign meeting at Port Alberni, sharing the platform with Comox-Alberni candidate Ben Wright.

He criticized the Liberal trade and diplomatic policies and stated that during a recent tour of Manitoba he found that the sentiment of the farmers against the government's policies was being translated into support for Social Credit.

He admitted that Social Credit candidates in eastern Canada are going to have "heavy time of it," though he said there is increasing interest in the movement.

Defence Minister Campney said Tuesday night the federal government "does far better" for British Columbia than the Social Credit government.

Mr. Campney, addressing an election rally in Vancouver was critical of Social Credit posters which urge a "better deal" from Ottawa.

He said the federal government paid out in B.C. last year $80,000,000 more than Ottawa collected in the province. "Other parties talk and complain, but the Liberal party has done things—for this city and this province as well as for all Canada."

He cited subsidies to the province-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway, $2,500,000 to be spent for paving the Alaska Highway and $6,000,000 in aid for the Cassiar-Stewart Highway.

Hundreds of construction workers in the Port Alberni district will be unable to vote because they arrived after the federal election writ was issued April 13.

Upwards of 500 men employed on a pulp and paper mill construction project and at the Ash River hydro development will be ineligible to cast ballots June 10.

P. Leo Anderson, returning officer for Comox-Alberni, said there is no way the men can get the vote unless they were registered in their home ridings and return there to vote. Most of the men reside in the Vancouver area.

Harold Hine, Social Credit candidate in Nanaimo riding, is doing his campaigning with his right ankle in a cast. He broke it when he fell while nailing a Social Credit campaign poster on a telephone pole during the weekend.

A telegram to Prime Minister St. Laurent urging the government to take immediate action on a low cost housing program in an effort to avert a strike of 30,000 coast woodworkers was sent Tuesday night by six Social Credit candidates on the lower mainland and Vancouver Island.

The telegram charged the

Dr. J. M. Thomas, CCF candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, at Mount Tolmie CCF Hall with Arthur Turner.

a real panic and would be openly inviting advice, help, succor.

Finally he stopped all the testing. Took off his lenses, wiped them professionally, and after a tantalizing time, coughed and said:

"Young man within a year you'll be as bald as I am!"

Yipes—I hadn't noticed the guy was bald.

"That is," he went on, "unless you are smarter than I was and catch the trouble before it catches up with you."

I SIGNED UP for 12 treatments.

Week after week I'd sneak into his office, feeling like a bookkeeper who was afraid they'd soon catch up to his embezzling.

I now became a clinic addict. I kept it up for six months and everything was going fine, including my hair. At times hope came to me when he told me mine might be one of the cases that was curable by treatments, "expensive ones."

I became self-satisfied with myself. I was whipping baldness as I had whipped calories. I'd perhaps consent now to let the vet give my dog the haircut.

Up until now I just couldn't see myself standing by and watching the dog's long hair fall to the floor of the vet's place.

LIFE WAS really being good to me. I was smarter than most bald boys.

Then one night, in a bragging mood, I told the wife how I was doing something that would go down in history. I had solved the baldness problem.

"Seen the back of your head lately?" she asked.

I hadn't. She advised me I had better take a good look. I did. Wow! I had a hole in the back end of my hair.

A hole in my hair.

I was so mad, I kicked the dog. He'd never get to that vet now.

U.S. NUCLEAR BLAST FIRED FROM BALLOON

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (AP)—The United States today exploded a baby nuclear device for the first time from a balloon 500 feet above Yucca Flat.

The explosion, touched off at 5:45 a.m., was barely discernible at Las Vegas, about 70 miles away.

The Atomic Energy Commission said officials at the control point 15 miles from the balloon saw a brief flash and several seconds later the usual mushroom appeared. It rose slowly to above 6,000 feet.

ELECTION RACE

Bennett prophesied "great gains for the Conservatives in Ontario and a few in the Maritimes. He said the Liberals would lose seats in every section of Canada."

No party will have a majority in the next Parliament, but the Social Credit representation will have increased more than any other party, said Bennett. This would put the Social Credit in the position of holding the balance of power.

Bennett said that in the instance that no party gets a majority in the Commons, as he predicts, the Social Credit party would join in "coalition or collusion with neither the Liberals nor the Conservatives."

He said that if the Social Credit gain the balance of power they would support the party in power which did away with the present "tight money" policy of the Liberal government.

"The question of national unity is the reason that I feel that Social Credit should have the balance of power in Ottawa at this time."

"Social Credit would stop both these old parties from playing one reign against another, and one group against another."

'NEED LESSON'—DOUGLAS

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP)—Premier T. C. Douglas said Tuesday the Liberal government has grown fat, complacent, indifferent and arrogant because of its long term in office and needs to be taught a lesson.

He told a political rally in support of Max Campbell, CCF candidate for The Battlefords, that in the last 25 years every economic reform and piece of progressive legislation had resulted from the CCF which had mobilized public opinion to force it upon the government.

Mr. Douglas quoted Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures to show that in the last 10 years the national income had risen to 235 from a standard 100. At the same time, he said, the net farm income had only gone to 139 from 100 and the wages of the individual worker to 198 from 100.

New Flooding Threatens Three Midwest States

DALLAS (AP)—Swollen by weeks of rain, big Lake Texoma poured torrents of water down the wandering Red River today, threatening floods in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Army engineers said Texoma, which sits astride the Texas-Oklahoma border north of here, would crest at Denison, Tex., dam at 644 feet above sea level some time Thursday or Friday. The flood control pool is 640 feet and the reading Tuesday night was 642.

The engineers said they were releasing 95,000 cubic feet of water per second. Inflow was 105,000 cubic feet. The overflow, coupled with severe thunderstorms predicted for the lower Red River valley today, threatened additional floodings as far as Fulton, Ark., on the lower Red.

'Risk' or 'Annihilation' Nuclear Expert Asserts

WASHINGTON (AP)—Atomic energy commissioner Willard F. Libby told Congress today that nuclear bomb testing is a "small risk" that must be measured against "the risk of annihilation . . . if we surrendered the weapons."

Libby's testimony was prepared for a Senate-House of Representatives atomic energy sub-committee which seeks to determine the effects of radiation and fallout.

Other scientists have testified that excessive man-made radiation can cause persons now on earth to develop cancers and do even more damage to generations yet unborn. "It is not contended that there is no risk," said Libby, an atomic physicist of international reputation, but he contended that there are various risks in many human activities. He mentioned the 40,000 highway deaths annually in the United States; the risk of actual survival?"

Libby said that if a general war should develop, the "massive use" of nuclear weapons not only would cause widespread of cancer and leukemia but would produce abnormalities in future generations far to run the risk of annihilation beyond what might be caused which might result if we run by fallout from weapons test-rendered the weapons which are ing.

Hills holding you back?

Switch to Shell Premium with TCP* and restore lost power while you drive!

How can a gasoline bring back power your engine has lost? Only by overcoming the cause! You see, most engines lose power as a result of certain deposits which form on spark plugs and in combustion chambers. In fact, engineers agree that these deposits are the major cause of power loss in modern high compression engines. (Even a new engine can lose power within 3,000 miles.) But TCP in Shell Premium Gasoline neutralizes these deposits while you drive—brings back the power your engine has lost.

Fairey Blasts 'Half-Truths' Of Opposition

The opposition parties have not been able to raise any major issue against the government in the current election campaign, Victoria Liberal candidate Dr. F. T. Fairey said Tuesday night.

"The only issue is whether we're going to have a continuance of good, stable and efficient government in Ottawa," he said.

Dr. Fairey spoke with Victoria Liberal MLA George Gregory at a meeting attended by 50 persons in the lower Crystal Garden ballroom.

He hit out at "exaggerated statements, misstatements and half-truths" being made by opposition candidates.

Criticism by Conservative candidate Maj. Gen. G. R. Pearkes of the government's guided missile program was just done for election purposes, Dr. Fairey said.

Although most weapons nowadays become obsolete within two or three years, the government must always maintain its

Social Security Scheme Defended

Dr. Fairey also answered a statement from provincial Health Minister Eric Martin that Ottawa is winking on its hospital construction grants, by reading a telegram from federal Health Minister Paul Martin.

"There has never been any delay in federal payments or approved claims submitted by provinces under hospital construction grants. Following my announcement May 23 in Vancouver that assistance under hospital construction grants would continue for a third five-year period, the only delay may be occasioned by the delay of the province in forwarding formal submissions for new construction requiring assistance under terms of the grant," Paul Martin said.

Mr. Gregory hit out at the campaign tactics of the other parties, particularly Social Credit, and said:

Egyptians in New Move to Renew Economic Ties with Britain, U.S.

CAIRO (UP)—The Egyptian government appeared today to be moving away from its economic dependence on the Soviet bloc and toward renewed economic ties with Britain and the United States.

Informal sources said Egypt and the United States had made preliminary contacts to negotiate an agreement for a partial release of Egypt's $30,000,000 in assets frozen in the United States when Egypt took over the Suez Canal.

Recently Egyptian and British trade experts met in Rome to try to unfreeze some $260,000,000 worth of Egyptian pound sterling frozen in Britain and to explore trade possibilities.

Soviet Ambassador E. D. Kisselev left for Moscow, Tuesday, after conferences with Egyptian Finance Minister Abdel Moneim Kaysouni, and it was understood Egypt was not totally satisfied with the way trade has been going.

The Soviet Union is now Egypt's biggest supplier of goods, but the debt of almost $20,000,000 at the eastern satellites are running a moment.

The Free Spenders

EVEN IN THE MERCURIAL politics of Washington the rapid fall of President Eisenhower's prestige must be something of a record. Last November he was overwhelmingly elected as the indispensable man, master of his party and nation. Today the Congress and its Republican legislators are in revolt against the President. He is appealing over their heads to the people but the appeal may well come too late.

Canadians will detect at once a parallel between Mr. Eisenhower's struggle and the major election issue in this country.

Like the Canadian Government, the President is defending his budget of $73.6 billions against fierce attack. This budget, like that of Canada, proposes a revenue surplus ($1.8 billions in the next year) as a partial weapon against inflation but the Administration's enemies, like the Conservatives of Canada, complain that the people are being needlessly "over-taxed."

This parallel between the issue in Ottawa and Washington is superficial and misleading.

The American legislators, both Republican and Democrat, who are denouncing the Eisenhower budget propose to reduce it before they think of reducing taxes. They are not proposing to plunge the nation into deficits which, financed by debt, would greatly stimulate inflation.

Item by item, the Congress is trying to pare down the Government's expenditures. These economies may be wise or unwise but they are definite economies. They would reduce the state's demand for goods and services and transfer this purchasing power to the public, leaving the inflationary problem little affected one way or the other.

In Canada, however, the issue of the present election is quite different. For here the Government's critics are not proposing any economies at all. No significant item in the present Canadian budget has been attacked by the official Opposition as excessive. No reductions were proposed in Parliament. No net reductions are being proposed in the election.

On the contrary, the Conservative Party, the CCF and Social Credit are competing in promises of increased expenditures all along the line.

The CCF is candid enough to admit that its policy will involve increased taxes, to be levied chiefly on business, which will hand them on to the consumer.

The Conservative and Social Credit parties promise to reduce taxes drastically while raising expenditures to a new high. They are thus proposing to launch the nation into huge deficits, into more inflation and, as Mr. Harris says, into bankruptcy.

Canadians are often critical of their neighbors' politics but the American debate today is much more realistic and honest than ours in Canada.

Mr. Pearson and the China Trade

IT IS CLEAR THAT THE CANADIAN Government approves Britain's bold step in expanding exports to Red China—a step which External Affairs Minister Pearson terms "realistic." Most Canadians will agree with him.

The United Kingdom has decided to accord Red China the same treatment as Russia receives, that is: restrictions on exports to that country will apply only to militarily strategic goods. The new trade policy will include North Korea and other communist-dominated countries in Asia.

With this decision, Britain has created an open break with the United States. For various reasons of policy the U.S. continues to deny Red China's Government recognition, and maintains the ban on exports that was imposed during the Korean war when Red China was an active, if undeclared, enemy. Both in diplomatic recognition, granted earlier, and in trade, Britain has now turned its back on American policy.

The Canadian Government for the past few years has held a position between these two diverging currents. Ottawa has regarded diplomatic recognition of Red China, along with representation in the United Nations, as ultimately inevitable. But in view of the many factors involved Canada has not felt that the issue should be forced.

The same applies to trade with Red China. Here also we have sided with Britain in principle, with only the matter of timing to be determined. Mr. Pearson has on numerous occasions indicated that Canada has no objections in principle to exporting non-strategic goods to Red China.

He went farther last week and pointed out for Washington's benefit that Canada has a heavy trade deficit with the United States and that this imbalance "cannot exist too long without damage." He added that our search for additional export markets would include prospects in the Far East.

The basic policy will be, he said: "Canada first, but not Canada alone."

Our relations with the United States are no longer "easy and automatic" as Mr. Pearson has often warned our neighbors. Where a choice must be made between differing British and American policies, the decision will be made with Canada's interests as the main consideration. Can the national administration of any country say more?

Ed McLean

ALTHOUGH HIS NAME OR PIC-ture did not appear in this paper Ed McLean was a key figure in its production. He was the man who sat in "the slot," the news editor to whose hands flowed dispatches from all parts of the globe to be assessed and checked, played up or discarded. The results of his news judgment appeared on the front page every day for the benefit of Greater Victoria readers. Ed McLean was tops at his job.

His death without a moment's warning last Monday evening shocked his colleagues and friends. It is a measure not only of his professional ability but of his personality that he was respected and warmly liked throughout the whole building.

Few men combine the needed attributes of a first-rate news editor: the critical judgment, the coolness under pressure, the ability to win cheerful co-operation from colleagues, the competence to tear a carefully constructed front page to pieces and rebuild it a few minutes before deadline when late news developments demand such drastic action.

All these things Ed McLean did. But he had much more and gave it. You could ask him about a news item three weeks after publication and from his photographic memory he could tell you the day and the page on which it ran and the size of head the story carried. His appreciative chuckle eased many a tense moment, his friendly hand was extended to young and old around the plant, his advice when sought was freely given, his courtesy was unfeigned.

Ed McLean was a fine newsman—the accolade of his profession; he was a fine man—the tribute of the many who knew him as a friend.

It is with these thoughts in mind that The Victoria Daily Times, and the men and women who produce it, join in expressing deepest sympathy to the surviving family members. It is these thoughts, too, which give to so formal a statement a genuine heart-felt sincerity.

What Goes Into It?

THERE ARE UNFORTUNATE implications of political cupboard love and class consciousness in the gustatory bait offered by Conservative and Social Credit candidates in New Westminster.

Ted Kuhn, Conservative, drew 2,000 to a Diefenbaker steak barbecue on his farm in that riding.

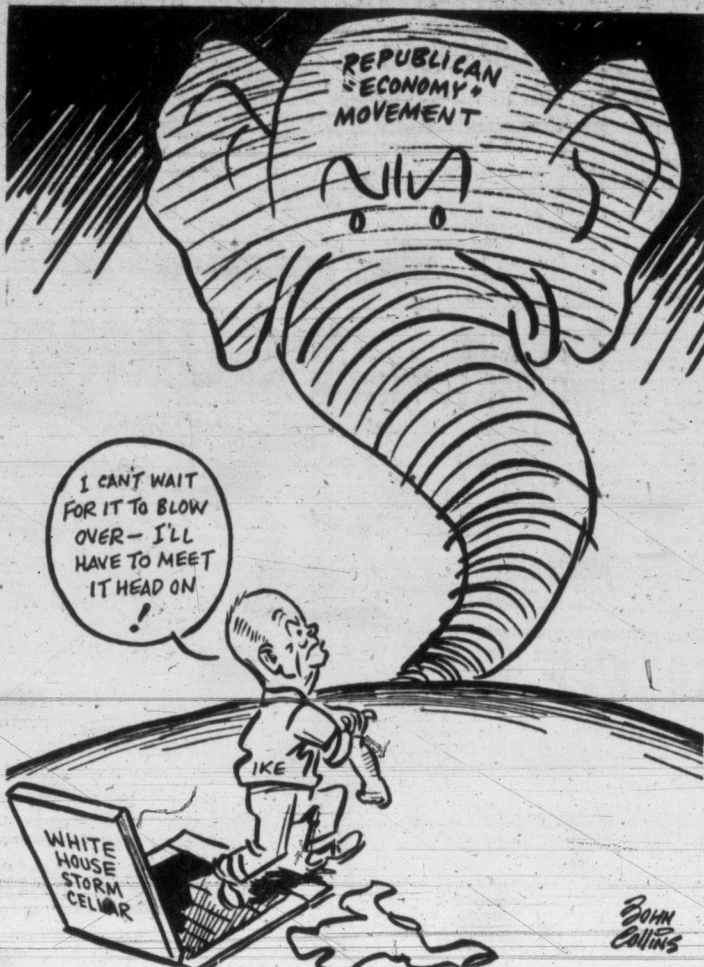

George Hahn drew only 1,000 to his Social Credit wiener roast at White Rock.

Beef, as any housewife knows, has superior attractions. That's why it costs so much at the butcher's.

But if George Hahn's wieners ran second best to Ted Kuhn's steaks, Mr. Hahn is to be complimented on one of the most honest symbolic presentations by any party in this election.

No one seems to know what goes into Social Credit. No one knows what goes into the sausage. Mr. Hahn may not have solved the two mysteries for his White Rock thousand, but he at least gave them a chance to make their own deductions about meat in a skin.

The Budget Tornado

NO FUTURE—I HOPE

By B. A. TOBIN

End of the Line

SOMEBODY turned on the radio the other evening and before I could get it switched off again I had been subjected to a whole chorus by some rock and roll ballroomer.

I can predict a short life for rock and roll, or else a short life for the civilization which produces and supports it. I hope it's the former, but if not, then the latter will be welcome. Rock and roll voices are notoriously poor, but there is this great advantage: that even when the song is largely unintelligible you can be sure you are missing nothing.

The teenager's answer to adult contempt of rock and roll is that the nonsense songs the latter enjoyed in the jazz age, thirty years ago were equally insane.

Most of them were silly, of that there's no doubt. But there was fun in them. You sang them with a grin. They represented time out from serious living; they were not serious living itself. They produced a chuckle, not heavy breathing; they were a gag, not a career.

He Had Hopes

The Oxford-bagged youth of the Don Herold school was a young chump, but it was recognized that he hadn't grown up yet, that this was a transitory stage through which he would pass and eventually enter adulthood.

But the rock and roll type, the modern "Elvis-figure" doesn't seem to have that transitory quality. He doesn't seem to be raw material which will evolve into something else.

He's it, the end product, and I can't see any future for him either as a youth or as an adult. Take a composite sample of the breed. He exists purely for exhibitionism. He sings but has no musical voice. He plays an instrument, but poorly. His clothes are rag-tag, hand-me-down, duds and mean nothing. His coiffure is rather effeminate; his sideburns male but not manly.

Serious Limitations

The intent of his art is not to entertain but to arouse; his objective is attention rather than perfection, admiration rather than appreciation. His medium is the howl and the squawk.

Such a character is an end-product, so far as I can see. He is not a branch of evolution that will grow into something more advanced but, like the dinosaur or pterodactyl, he has run into a blind end.

You can't think of the Elvis-figure applying for a job anywhere. Even as a cowboy, which seems to be his nearest antecedent—although the now-traditional guitar-strumming fellow in the ten-gallon hat is a far cry from the working cow-poke—you can't imagine him as more than a joke.

The quivering rock and roll vocalist inspires no confidence that he could endure heat, cold, thirst, pain and hard going. Maybe he could, but he just doesn't look like it.

Nor can you visualize him as having the patience and determination to do farm work, the application to handle an office job, or the pride and precision of a top mechanic. You can't see him at a microscope dredging a secret out of nature, at the helm of a merchantman moving carefully through fog.

You can't see him building a fishing boat, sweating in a mine, scoring a touchdown that took training to achieve, or checking over a set of books for accuracy.

Not Up to It

Maybe he can do all these things, this dream figure created out of misdirected desire, emotionalism. But he just doesn't seem to be the right guy for it.

Worse than that, the rock and roll ideal, as a representative figure of our times, doesn't impress me as likely to advance and grow into any of these productive persons. He seems to have nothing solid on which to build.

It's impossible to think of him as growing older and better at his art, of progressing from stage to stage until he reaches the competence of middle age or the dignity of old age. There is no place for him in these categories.

Indeed, the only analogy which seems to fit the 1957 prototype is to liken him to a hareem favorite. While he's young and pretty he'll be in demand. But he'll never age. He'll just suddenly disappear. But as I said before, I'm just predicting, not complaining.

MARKED for READING

REBELS CHAINED
Rebels, as I have come to realize, are never quite emancipated from the people against whom they rebel. Whatever these people have admired, they have to decay; whatever these people have decried, they have to admire. Their opinions are thus dictated, in reverse, by their enemies. It only gradually becomes apparent that there is no such simple way of arriving at the truth.
—Bertrand Russell.

TWO FUNCTIONS

They are office buildings and they are symbols at the same time. I think every house should be this way, just as a beautiful body had a physical normal working body and at the same time a beautiful facade. It's the same combination we should try to get.

Election Opinion

Conscience

Sacred federal candidates, including Messrs. Skillings and Bell, who are fully aware of the dictatorial conduct of the three-man B.C. Sacred Government dictatorship, must have a difficult time with their consciences when they think of the Sommers case and the Cassiar Road fiasco.

That is the sort of conduct we would undoubtedly get from the Sacred federal ally if they got enough power.

All of the back benchers and members of the Sacred Party are afraid to assert themselves and by their silence are condoning stalling, the citizens know to be wrong, and they still sing "Oh! God our help in ages past."

No wonder Mr. Bennett is in a quandary. Things will catch up with him. He will reap the whirlwind one of these days.

FRANK H. PARTRIDGE,
1604 Belmont Avenue.

Only Alternative

It must surely now be abundantly clear to the electors as the campaign has progressed that the only alternative to the Liberal Government in Ottawa is a Conservative Government under the leadership of The Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker.

If it were a two-way fight throughout the nation (as it is for the most part) it is quite clear that the St. Lawrence Government would be defeated. If the people of Canada in general and British Columbia in particular desire a change of government there is only one course open to them and that is to vote for the Conservative candidates in their respective ridings.

There are three ways to ensure the return of the Liberal Government:

The first, of course, is to vote for the Liberal candidate, and second and third, equally effective, is to vote for the Social Credit or CCF candidates.

This situation applies particularly to the 22 British Columbia seats where Social Credit might be a confusing factor. It is only in British Columbia where any real effort has been made by the Social Credit to win federal seats. The Alberta Social Credit Cabinet is not taking part to any extent in the campaign. Mr. Manning does not aspire to be Prime Minister.

It has been said with some truth that many Conservatives supported Social Credit provincially but I strongly suggest that Premier Bennett and his Social Credit federal candidates have definitely alienated Conservative support by their unbridled criticism not only of the Conservative Party but also of its leader, John G. Diefenbaker.

ROBERT D. HARVEY,
620 View Street.

Remember Dundee

Mr. Alistair Fraser, Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, is quoted by the newspapers with reference to the political party of his opponent, Dr. J. M. Thomas, as follows: "Even if I shared all their views, I would not be so blind and stupid as to ally myself with them because it has become quite evident that they have absolutely no chance." As a student of political history, particularly of elections, Mr. Fraser should do better than this.

Sir Winston Churchill (then a Lib.

FROM BAGHDAD, IRAQ

By JOSEPH ALSOP

The Two Conflicting Views

ONE of the most enigmatic and important personages in all the Middle East is His Royal Highness, Abdul Ilah, the uncle and chief advisor of Iraq's King Faisal and the Crown Prince of the kingdom. The Egyptians and his other enemies, who are not few, picture the Crown Prince as a dark intriguer endlessly plotting—plotting above all to seize his young nephew's throne, which he in fact conserved against all hazards through fourteen years as regent. In this task, he passed through many nerve-testing times.

But these past times have left no outward mark upon the Crown Prince. When he receives you in his small, pleasant, book-lined study in the palace, you find an easily polite, mild-mannered somewhat dapper man in early middle age.

At first glance, he seems more likely to be really at home breeding his Arab horses than guiding the affairs of one of the largest, most complex and most stormily inclined Arab countries.

At first glance, indeed, one is chiefly struck by the sharp contrast between this mild, polite man and the magnificent acquiline arrogance of those two great romantic heroes of the Lawrence story of "Revolt in the Desert," the Crown Prince's father, the Emir Ali, and his uncle, the Emir Faisal. Their portraits in desert robes are his study's chief ornaments, and at first they seem to overwhelm him.

Autocratic Strain

But as the Crown Prince tells his own remarkable story and shrewdly discusses his country's problems, you begin to discern a strain of astute, temperate autocracy that might not, after all, have been so very foreign to the splendid figures haughtily gazing from the wall.

Two of his remarks, in particular, impressed this reporter. One concerned the great development program into which the Iraq government is pouring the lion's share of its rich oil revenues.

"I sometimes wish," he said, "that I could just put all the people to sleep who want a different course for Iraq, and then wake them up five years from now to see what this country has become."

"I can remember when people who wore shoes used to pay porters to carry them on their backs across the main shopping street of Baghdad on rainy days; and the difference in Rashid Street now is nothing to the difference we are going to see in the lives of the Iraqi people in another five years."

As for his second remark, it concerned the claim of the Nasser-style Arab eral) relates in his book "Thoughts and Adventures" the story of the famous Dundee election. In 1910 Dundee elected the redoubtable Winston by a plurality of over 10,000 votes. His opponent, Mr. Scrimgeour, a Prohibitionist, in a city famous for its brewing of many potent Scottish beverages, polled less than 400 votes. By 1922 he defeated Mr. Churchill, polling nearly 35,000 votes!

Living, as we are, on the threshold of a nuclear age of gravest potential danger of highest good, the return to parliament of a well-informed minority group member may well be of highest importance as a curb to wrong (majority) thinking and as a spur to right action in matters of international and national concern. In the last parliament it will generally be conceded Mr. Stanley Knowles frequently and persistently represented as a minority group representative the views of the majority of Canadian voters against a parliamentary majority. Such men are of infinite value.

Ardent adherents and supporters of both old-line parties and of their ebullient offspring, the Social Credit Party, will not of course vote for Dr. J. M. Thomas. There must however be many hundreds of independent voters, not allied with any particular party, to whom such vital matters as pensions, hospital and health care, education costs and inflated prices are of deepest and increasing concern. These voters may quite likely regard Dr. Thomas in this campaign as a man of rare political courage, intellectual honesty and integrity, widely and wisely informed in the studies which I have mentioned. For these reasons they may well feel prepared to "give him his chance" on June 10th.

1220 Third Street, Sidney.

B.C. People Will Pay

I would appreciate a little space in The Times to comment on the coming election and the elaborate advertising adopted by the Sacreds, the enormous posters facing the public at every billboard to the exclusion of other advertising, also the little booklet with the Sacred promise. The extremes to which they have gone to try and put over their funny money idea does not even make political sense.

Their promised $28 tax rebate to home owners is class legislation. No word of what they intend to do for the underprivileged—who have to pay rent and try to exist on approximately $50 per month. The 5 per cent tax is the highest in the Dominion.

Their promise of $60 to $100 per month is just vote-catching nonsense. At least the voters are too intelligent to swallow this line. Now here are my predictions. The Liberal government will be returned to power on its past record, with a reduced working majority, which will make for good government. The Conservatives will be the official opposition with the CCF following and the Sacreds struggling in the rear.

The enormous amount of money being squandered by the Sacreds will have to be paid by B.C. taxpayers. The attempt to sell out the enormous timber and mineral resources through the Wenner-Gren interests, the attempt to turn over our waterpower resources to U.S.A. power corporations, will be viewed with suspicion by the public of this country.

DENNIS H. CHIVERS,
490 Vincent Avenue.

nationalists to be the leaders of the Arabs.

"I do not think they are true leaders," he said. "For the true leader must first consider the real interests of the masses he seeks to lead."

These two remarks have seemed worth reproducing in their human context because they so accurately sum up the underlying philosophy of the Iraqi government in which the Crown Prince and tough old Prime Minister Nuri Pasha are the two key figures.

It is the exact opposite of the philosophy of the Nasser-style Arab nationalism, which is all popular emotion and utterly neglects work on the foundations.

The Iraqi-style philosophy, by contrast, ignores popular emotions, sternly repressing them if need be, and places its whole emphasis on building the foundations of a stronger, better, more modern country.

The foundations are being built, there is no doubt about that. The change in Iraq in the last year is dramatically evident to the returning observer. The seed investments of the development program are at last beginning to produce real growth.

Rising Level

You see the work and bustle here in Baghdad. You see a whole city, long half dead, suddenly coming back to life in Mosul. Above all, you see a people once miserably badly off, still rather badly off, but now at least with work to do and the first experience of a rising level of life.

It is an inspiring and exciting spectacle. You cannot help but feel that even if the Iraqi government does not have a popular majority today—which it does not—the majority will come later when a really decent level of life has been attained and the concurrent effort to raise the educational level of the illiterate masses has also produced results.

But there is another view, which in fairness should be recorded.

This view was best expressed by Abdul Rahman Al-Bazzaz, former dean of the Baghdad University law school, who was deprived of his post and locked up for his agitation against Nuri Pasha's government in the Suez crisis.

He is free now to practice law and to receive such visitors as this reporter in his handsome house and garden. He is not embittered and he is not an extremist.

But he talked with passion of the immediate need for real democracy in Iraq, as "the only way we can learn to rule ourselves"; and he added grimly, "if this keeps on, it will not matter what the development program achieves, the extremists will win the country in the end."

Between these opposing views you may take your choice.

What Joey Says Goes

Times' United Nations correspondent Charles Lynch is taking a human holiday from Lake Success to take a look at the general election. Here, he analyses the situation in Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — In this province, they say, what Joey says goes, on politics and maybe a lot of other things, as well. And, they add, Joey, otherwise Premier Joseph R. Smallwood, says to vote Liberal, so that's that.

Some Liberal Party strategists even felt that so certain was Newfoundland to return several Liberals on June 10 there was no need for Prime Minister St. Laurent to come here at all—that his time could better be spent in places where Liberal candidates needed his helping hand.

But other, and perhaps wiser, views prevailed and Mr. St. Laurent came this week to Newfoundland, devoting a precious two days on the eve of the final week of a strenuous campaign to a province that by most accounts was a sure thing for the Liberals.

No doubt he is glad he did come, for while he must have been disappointed by the size of the crowd he drew here, it indicated as well as such things can the fact that, at least in the two ridings that centre around the city of St. John's, the party is going to have to fight to retain its seats.

The magic of Premier Smallwood is still there—or at least the dynamism and personal appeal of the man is still there—but the fact is that his own best efforts could not turn out a crowd of over 900 people in a stadium that can hold almost 5,000. Nobody expected 5,000 but when Mr. St. Laurent appeared here in 1953 he drew several thousands to an open air meeting. True, that election was held in the warmth of the summer, and equally true, Premier Smallwood took a more forceful part in that campaign, his activities this time having been curtailed somewhat by his recent family tragedy.

HURRIED BUILD-UP

It was also true that four years ago Newfoundlanders were nearer to confederation than they are today, and were anxious to get a look at the man who was the Canadian Prime Minister, and who led the negotiations on the Canadian side that brought Newfoundland into confederation.

This time the build-up that preceded the premier's visit started only 24 hours before he arrived. The night before he came, the streets suddenly blossomed with flags—strings of them along the streets. Loud speakers blared the news of his coming, and

Premier Smallwood exhorted the people to turn out. He quickly took charge of everything, from the placing of the ropes at the airport to the exact route of the motorcade.

The crowd at the rally, while disappointing by the usual Smallwood standard, was much larger than that attracted by the Progressive-Conservative leader, Mr. John Diefenbaker, when he came here at the very start of the election campaign. But Mr. Diefenbaker is not a well-known figure here, and the Progressive-Conservatives are running more on the personalities of their local candidates than on the Diefenbaker reputation.

They have a strong candidate in St. John's West in the person of S. J. Browne, who represented the riding at Ottawa from 1949 to 1953 and gave up his seat in the provincial legislature to run again this time, and in St. John's East with James McGrath. The main strength of the Progressive-Conservatives is in this city, and while it would be a minor miracle if the Tories capture any other Newfoundland seat, an upset could be in the cards for one or other of the St. John's seats, or both.

'SAILOR' PICKERSGILL

There were no surprises in Mr. St. Laurent's speech—re-elect us if you think we have done a good job, throw us out if you don't. There were local asides, some fun at the expense of the candidate for Bonaville-Twillingate, "Sailor" Jack Pickersgill.

There was more than the usual emphasis on family benefits, for Newfoundland has been filling up with children since confederation and you can scarcely drive the streets or the country roads without scattering crowds of pre-school 'tykes. The prime minister mentioned this, and found it good.

And he reported that, having taken soundings from sea to sea, he was more confident than ever that the Liberals would be returned to power. "You hear that?" said Joey Smallwood to the people. "Now, don't waste your votes by sending men to Ottawa who will sit in the wilderness of opposition." The terms of union under which Newfoundland joined Canada are up for revision, he reminded—send Liberals to Ottawa and you can be sure the federal benefits will be revised upward.

Mr. St. Laurent beamed, and went on his way to the echo of three cheers led by the premier who, in the words of the song, rants and roars like a true Newfoundlandian even if the people, at least here in St. John's, don't rant and roar in reply as much as he might like.

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN

All in the Family

LONDON—Strictly personal. . . I see that at Sotheby's, the famous London auction rooms, a painting by my great-great-grandfather (I may be short one "great" there because he died in 1823) has sold for $4,800. This is a fair price, but not sensational for Raeburn, Scotland's and one of the world's top portrait painters.

His "McNab" was bought by Dewar, the whisky people, for $150,000 and this big portrait stands—floodlit at night—in the window of their London offices. Everyone knows Raeburn, if only for his painting of Boy With a Rabbit, which has been gracing candy boxes and calendars for many generations.

Interruption while you ask how come if his name's spelled Raeburn and mine's Reyburn he is my great-etc-grandfather? I'm glad you asked that. It's a short story. I'll make it as long as possible.

It seems that back in the 18th century there were four brothers up in Scotland who owned a factory that made Gleggery bonnets. They had a family row and two of the brothers broke away and set up their own Gleggery bonnet factory.

In those days people were not fussy about the precise spelling of names (there are still arguments over the correct spelling of Shakespeare) and the family name got all sorts of variations such as Rayburn, Raburn, Raeburn, Reyburn. However, with two firms of brothers in the Gleggery business things got very confused and there was many a fight as to which firm orders were addressed to.

So they got together and decided that one pair of brothers would call themselves Raeburn and the other pair would spell it Reyburn. The portrait painter came down on the Raeburn side and I wound up on the other.

Perhaps because in the old days our clan were not the marrying type, there are not many of us with the Reyburn spelling around. I only encountered one in Canada outside our immediate family. The name was above a shop and thinking that perhaps it was some long-lost cousin I went in to talk to the owner.

He turned out to be a Middle-European immigrant whose real name was something like Reinbergenstoft and when changing his name to something less foreign he had seen my by-line in a paper and thought "Reyburn" would do as well as any.

Raeburn the painter was a baronet and the title has come down through the years to the present Sir William Raeburn, Bart. in Scotland. Being the eldest son of an eldest son, I'm likely to have to go to the Scottish courts to claim my title against rivals who will object to the different spelling.

But I don't think that will be in the near future. There are so many ahead of me in line that it will require nothing short of a ghastly epidemic among the Raeburns before I become Sir Wallace Reyburn, Bart.

GALT, Ont. (CP) — Social Credit Leader Solon Low said Tuesday night John Diefenbaker was "asleep at the switch" in the matter of an election letter sent to Canadian servicemen by the Liberal party.

Independent Liberal Quits Ontario Race

OTTAWA (CP) — Chief electoral officer Nelson Castonguay announced Tuesday night that J. Fred Green has withdrawn as independent Liberal candidate in the Toronto constituency of York South.

That leaves four candidates still in the running there: William G. Beech, Progressive Conservative; Marvin Gelber, Liberal; William Setton, CCF; Sloan A. Smith, Social Credit.

Mr. Castonguay's brief announcement gave no reason for Mr. Green's withdrawal.

Adequate Water Finally Assured Vantreight Drive

Long controversial Vantreight Drive and about 20 property owners who live on it will get an adequate water supply this year after 36 years of waiting.

In a special meeting called by Sanich council Monday, residents agreed to compromise by allowing five feet on each side of the road to be expropriated, which will allow a new water main to be laid.

It is expected the new line will be no less than four inches in diameter, which will provide adequate water supply for the first time since the area was subdivided in 1921.

Most property adjoining the lane is owned by the Vantreight family, which wanted a 40-foot road instead of the present 20-foot width. Other residents objected to this proposal because it would mean too great a loss to their relatively smaller lots.

The road now will become municipal property rather than access to properties in the subdivision.

The new water main will be installed through a local improvement by-law. The Vantreight family agreed to the 30-foot width of the road when other residents agreed to consider an additional five-foot allowance on future property sold.

Canadians Assured Fast News Of Election Returns Monday

OTTAWA (CP) — Special instructions aimed at bringing the Canadian people the fastest possible news of the federal election results have been issued by the chief electoral officer, Nelson Castonguay.

He has urged all returning officers and their deputies to do everything they can to aid The Canadian Press and other news media in promptly collecting accurate returns in the June 10 election.

This fast collection of returns, and the fact the Liberals swept the eastern provinces, helped the CP to flash the return of the Liberal government at 7.15 p.m. PDT, in 1949. This little more than an hour after polls closed in Ontario and Quebec, which elect most of the Commons members.

OF UTMOST IMPORTANCE
"Returning officers have been requested to advise candidates or their political organizations of the arrangements that are being made for the collection of election returns and to furnish the candidates or their representatives with progressive bulletins, upon request, as soon as these are available."

In each polling station established in the locality of the returning officer's office, the deputy returning officer has been instructed to deliver his ballot box and an accompanying envelope containing a preliminary statement of the poll to the returning officer as soon as possible after closing of the poll. Each deputy returning officer for outlying polling stations has been instructed to telephone or telegraph the appropriate officer of the result from his poll as soon as the count is completed.

HOME GARDEN

Geum Chiloense Popular Perennial

Although introduced to gardens in the 18th century, the hardy perennial Geum (pronounced with a soft "g") chiloense always attracts attention at this time of the year.

Many gardeners have never seen it before, yet geum is attractive in leaf and flower, demanding no cultural skill.

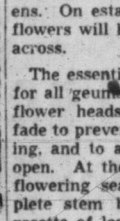

The rosette of basal leaves is only three or four inches high, but the deeply veined and lobed leaves are a rich bronzy green.

From these rosettes rise the long stems of such garden favorites as the variety Mrs. Bradshaw, intense orange scarlet, Lady Stratheden, deep yellow, and Prince of Orange, orange-gold.

and will reach 30 inches in height, carrying many flowers. Each flower resembles a semi-double rose (geum belongs to the great Rosaceae family) centred with a mass of short stamens. On established plants the flowers will be over two inches across.

The essential point of culture for all geums is the removal of flower heads as soon as they fade to prevent seed from forming, and to allow every bud to open. At the end of the main flowering season cut the complete stem back to the basal rosette of leaves.

Apart from G. chiloense and its garden varieties, there are several species and hybrids suitable for the rock garden, since they have flower stems only a few inches high. Their requirement is for good drainage in winter and a soil containing peat moss and leaf-mould.

Full Employment by Fall For Hungarians—Fraser

Canadian immigration policy with respect to Hungarian refugees was defended at View Royal Tuesday night by Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, Alistair Fraser.

He said those now unemployed should be fully adjusted and working by the fall of this year.

A questioner said thousands of Hungarians are walking the streets, notably in Abbotsford. Immigration officials, he said, could give no information on what will become of them.

FEW JOBS
Mr. Fraser said the public must recall the emergency situation which brought about transfer here of many Hungarians in early winter—a time of slack employment.

"They had a dreadful time in Hungary and it became a policy to take as many as we could."

"I confidently expect the situation will be remedied in the summer and by the fall they will be adjusted."

Mr. Fraser said Liberal government policy is to bring in "as large a number of immigrants as can be efficiently absorbed."

Although he holds that one man is as good as another, British immigrants are found most satisfactory because of "easier assimilation." Large numbers could be expected to arrive this summer.

"We think we have the room and the opportunity."

The audience of 12 was one of Mr. Fraser's smallest, but asked most questions.

The candidate discounted a Star Weekly editorial asserting that American money was gaining control of Canada—that United States sources had invested $940 in Canada for every man, woman and child living here.

NO CONTROL
He said it was government policy to "funnel as much money as is consistent with Liberal policies" into Canadian development. But at the same time no control could be exerted over private capital.

The candidate ticked off Victoria Social Credit candidate Waldo Skillings for charging the present so-called tight-money policies are detrimental to the national welfare and due to Liberal maladministration.

EFFECT, NOT CAUSE
Mr. Fraser quoted the national manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, M. C. C. Ross, as stating the federal government tight-money policy is wrongly blamed for things "of which it is the effect rather than the cause."

Added Mr. Fraser: "Mr. Ross, a banker, defends the so-called tight-money policy and one of the directors of the Canadian Bank of Commerce is Social Credit financial advisor, Einar Gunderson."

"How can Mr. Skillings make the statements he does, bearing in mind his loyalty to the management of the Bank of Commerce through his dedication to Mr. Gunderson, who is on the board?"

"Who is right, Mr. Gunderson or Mr. Skillings?"

Vancouver Turns Down Airport Sale

From CP Dispatches

VANCOUVER — Vancouver will not sell its big Sea Island international airport to the federal government.

City council voted Tuesday to reject a $1,500,000 federal offer and retain the money-making airport as a city-owned asset.

Mayor Fred Hume cast the deciding vote after aldermen voted four in favor and four against.

The 25-year-old airfield produces $200,000 profit a year.

The city will retain full control of administration and development, with the transport department continuing to pay all runway costs and to handle flight operations.

The city early this year offered to sell the airport to the federal government for $3,000,000 after the transport department declined to assure financial assistance in construction of a new $5,000,000 passenger terminal.

VANCOUVER — A two-day strike of 10 office workers at National Paper Box Ltd. believed to be the first strike of office workers in Canada—ended Tuesday.

One hundred and forty plant workers honored the picket line established Monday morning by office workers.

VANCOUVER—Bail of $7,500 was set Tuesday for Norman Taylor, 23, charged with nine counts of arson. Taylor appeared in police court and was remanded to June 11 by Magistrate Oscar Orr. The charges involve alleged arson of six homes and business firms, including an attempt on his own home.

Farm Import Curb Urged by Kiernan

Canada cannot allow "unrestricted" agricultural imports if there is to be economic stability here, B.C. Mines Minister Kenneth Kiernan told an election meeting Tuesday attended by 40 persons.

Speaking in support of Noel Bell, Esquimalt-Saanich Social Credit candidate, he said "you've got to control your imports on a given range of commodities."

The federal government, he told the audience at Lake Hill Women's Institute Hall, had control of imports today.

By a sound agricultural policy, said the former agricultural minister, wheat surpluses in Canada could be reduced "in one year."

He urged long-term low-interest loans for farmers and said farmers were "entitled" to a good standard of prices.

Mr. Bell accused the federal government of trying to stop business by its "tight money" policy, particularly on housing.

He urged that Canada's surplus food be given the world's hungry people, and this would reduce chances of war.

"If we can remove the causes of war, we won't have to spend so much on defence."

Story of the Doctor Who Prescribed for Himself

1 Once there was this smart doc who bought a great big hearse of a benzine buggy. It looked so good on the salesroom floor.

2 But this over-chromed, outsized jalopy needed a gas transfusion every few miles. And it was so big and long the doc never could find parking space at the hospital.

3 "I'm suffering from car-itis," said the doc. So he went and looked at a cute little foreign job, but it wouldn't even begin to hold all of his family.

4 Then he looked at Rambler—only car with American "big car" roominess and foreign car economy and maneuverability. "I'm prescribing Rambler for myself," said the doctor.

5 It didn't take him long to find out that he could own two Ramblers—both a 6 and a new V-8—for no more than it cost him to own his big, overgrown hulk of a car. So he bought 'em.

6 Now the doc has to fight with his wife and the kids to even get to drive one car. He's at the point where he's about to own three Ramblers. Try a Rambler. You'll see!

'New Low', Says McPhillips On Liberal Pitch to Forces

A letter from Prime Minister audience of 26 in the Boilermakers' St. Laurent to members of Can. Hall, Esquimalt.

He produced a copy of the letter and said it had been sent to all servicemen by the National Liberal Federation over a facsimile of Mr. McPhillips, Progressive Conservative candidate for Victoria, Tuesday night.

"Electioneering methods of this kind cannot be too strongly condemned," Mr. McPhillips told an

NEW LOW

"This is a new low in political morality," he said. It is a sign of fear and desperation.

"It is extraordinary that the Prime Minister has seen fit to make a personal appeal to the armed forces, since it was only through government records that the names of these servicemen were available to Mr. St. Laurent."

He quoted the letter as saying: "You are taking an active part in the building of your country. World peace is essential to Canada's development and your Liberal government is working for peace."

It spoke of benefits to the Canadian armed forces under a Liberal administration and concluded: "To make sure this progress continues and to safeguard the future of your country, which is proud of you and of which you yourself are proud, I invite you to mark your ballot for the Liberal candidate in your home constituency."

PAY PROMISE

Mr. McPhillips also denounced the government for "promising" civil servants increased salaries if they were returned to power.

"If civil servants deserve more pay they should get it regardless of an election. The government has obviously reached the point where it no longer considers political morality as essential."

The Victoria candidate urged development of modern ferry terminals at Ogden Point and Saanichton Bay to give Lower Vancouver Island fast sea links to both the Lower Mainland and United States ports.

Impaired Driver Fined $250, Must Yield Licence

Angus R. MacDonnell, 723 Yates, was fined $250 and his licence suspended indefinitely in Saanich police court today for impaired driving.

Police said he was driving on Quadra at about 11.30 p.m. Monday with a long line of cars behind his car proceeding at five miles an hour.

When the police patrol signalled for him to stop, MacDonnell did so a block further on, and when he was asked to get out of his car, the driver and his passenger both protested to the extent the aid of a passing citizen and additional police were required to remove them.

Big Shortage of Teachers Held 'Deadly as Invasion'

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Chemical Institute of Canada was told Tuesday that the shortage of teachers is a "national emergency as real and as deadly in the long run as a military invasion."

J. A. Spragg of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation, said during a panel discussion on high school chemistry education that the "emergency must be handled with the same disregard for cost as a military emergency."

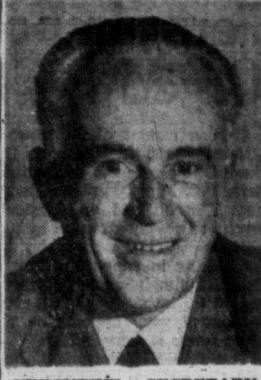

British Columbians, he said, spend as much on new passenger cars as on education. In the U.S. and Canada more was spent on golfing equipment than on professors' salaries.

"You could raise salaries of teachers in B.C. by 50 per cent at a cost of $20,000,000, which is less than the people spend for tobacco products," he said.

C. J. Warrington, chairman of the chemical education sections of the institute, said immigrants are "saving the day" for Canada so far as technical men in chemistry and chemical-engineering are concerned.

He felt the cover-all total of chemists and chemical engineers, however, is in line with demand.

Mr. Warrington said the excess of demand indicated in various publications probably resulted from a "misuse" of chemists and chemical engineers in jobs not requiring them.

EXECUTIVE SECRETARY of the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee will be Capt. D. J. Proudfoot, who is a member of Victoria Library Board and also serves on the executive of the provincial centennial committee. Temporary headquarters for the Greater Victoria committee is City Hall.

U.K. Relaxes Dollar Ban For Travelling

LONDON (UP)—The government announced Tuesday the end of the austerity measure which has prevented British tourists from freely visiting the United States and other dollar-area countries since the Second World War.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Peter Thorneycroft said that tourists will be allowed to use up to 100 pounds ($280) a year in the dollar areas from now to the end of October.

Previously, the government had banned dollar-spending for tourists to conserve the gold and dollar reserves of Britain. Only businessmen could change British money into dollars for travel to the dollar areas.

Babe Drowns in Bath When Mother Faints

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—An expectant mother fainted Tuesday while bathing her 15-month-old son and found him drowned when she recovered. The victim was Antonio Rios, son of Mrs. Dolores Rios, 20. Police said the tragedy occurred when the baby playfully tossed a brush from the tub. Mrs. Rios lost consciousness when she leaned to pick up the brush.

UNITED NATIONS (UP)—Hungarian Premier Janos Kadar was emasculated on Russian orders to make him subservient to the Kremlin, according to well-backed evidence collected by the U.N. special committee investigating the anti-Communist revolt in Hungary.

GI Trial in Japan Brings Storm Of Protest, Probe by Senators

WASHINGTON (AP)—The decision to let Japan try an American soldier on homicide charges brought on a United States Senate investigation today, along with promise of more to come.

Defence department counsel were called into a closed meeting of an armed services subcommittee to determine "if the facts justified the action taken."

And Senator Ralph Flanders, Rep. Vt., said that "we propose to find out who is responsible for this blunder."

William C. Girard of Ottawa, Ill., faces a Japanese trial on a charge of killing a Japanese woman, Mrs. Naka Sakai, 46, last Jan. 30. Girard was charged with shooting her while attempting to chase scavengers away from an army firing range.

EISENHOWER APPROVED
The decision to let Japanese courts try Girard was announced jointly Tuesday by State Secretary Dulles and Defence Secretary Wilson.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said that "certainly" President Eisenhower had approved of the decision.

Girard, 21, re-enlisted in 1955 after a two-year army hitch which had included service in Japan. He is engaged to marry a Japanese girl.

Slain Islander's Mother Would Save Doomed Logger

VANCOUVER (CP) — The mother of a man murdered last New Year's Day said Tuesday she is preparing an appeal to the justice department on behalf of the man convicted of slaying her son.

Mrs. John Ianson of Campbell River, said she has consulted a lawyer to see what she can do to save Thomas Symes, 31-year-old logger from Duncan, who is scheduled to be hanged June 25, after being convicted of shooting Paul Fowling, 28, described as "his best friend," after finding Fowling in a boarding house room with Symes' estranged wife. In the latest development, the Supreme Court of Canada turned down his appeal against the conviction and sentence.

NANAIMO INDIANS SET FOR U.S. CANOE RACE

NANAIMO (CP) — Eleven Nanaimo area Indians will take part this weekend in an international Indian war canoe race at Gooseberry Point, near Bellingham, Wash.

They will be among seven Vancouver Island crews competing against B.C. mainland and Washington state crews. Skipper Robert Stewart of No. 1 Reserve received a cheque Tuesday from Nanaimo Kiwanis Club to help pay travelling expenses.

The crew moves its 46-foot, 400-pound cedar dugout at a smart 110 strokes to the minute.

Mrs. Ianson said the "hanging of Thomas Symes will not bring my son back to life." She added she will "do everything I can to save him."

She has written to Symes in the Oakalla prison death row and has received two answering letters from him.

Meanwhile, A. J. McLeod, federal director of remissions, has written to Symes' sister in Duncan that her plea on behalf of her brother as well as a petition signed by 1,700 persons in Duncan and Victoria "will receive every consideration."

Mr. McLeod said the plea from Mrs. Winnie Stark, who filed her own petition as well as the mass petition, has been referred to the solicitor general for study.

Doug Peden OUTDOOR REPORT

Arguments for and against the payment of bounties on predatory animals have been kicked around for longer than any of us can remember.

Man is the greatest predator of them all, and everyone seems to agree that he should help protect game birds and animals from their natural enemies to compensate for the toll he takes. But how many can agree on the best method of control?

Until comparatively recent years, the fight against varmints was carried on by offering bounties. The system helped, but never quite made the grade as a satisfactory means of control, partially because the bounties were seldom large enough to pay more than bare expenses of predator hunters.

Since the last war, the idea that money formerly paid for bounties could be more effectively used by adding a predator control division to state or provincial game departments has spread across the continent.

Adopted by British Columbia, the system works well with most animals and the province now pays bounty money only on cougars. The amount per cougar is $20 and, since 1951, on Vancouver Island there has also been a "bonus" bounty of $20 on each of the big cats killed by registered cougar hunters.

To qualify for the bonus, a hunter must have five cats to his credit, own at least one tracking dog, and agree to answer calls from the game department to go after cougars reported in his area.

When the province abolished the $4 coyote bounty in 1954 and wiped out the $25 wolf bounty a year later, howls of protest went up.

Bonus Bounty Rumored on Way Out

Now there may be another argument brewing. Rumor has it that the bonus cougar bounty will be discontinued within a couple of years.

The main arguments for those advocating a return to a straight $20 bounty, or none at all, are that:

1. The bonus has not produced a greater cougar kill on Vancouver Island. In fact, cat scalps recorded in 1956 were less than half the 182 collected in 1955.

2. There is an unexpectedly large percentage of bounties being paid to bonus hunters. In other words, they suggest there may be a bit of skulduggery going on to collect extra money for cougars downed by unregistered hunters.

In reply, the pro-bonus boys point out that the fact that the mountain lion kill has diminished could be taken as strong evidence that the system has paid off. Fewer cougars could be the reason for fewer bounties.

They also argue that $40 is a cheap price for a dead cat. The cost of moving a department hunter and his trained hounds into an area is often several times that amount. And the difference in time between sending a predator control man or a nearby bonus hunter to the scene of a reported mountain lion can spell the difference between a cold trail and a stock-killer still at large, or a hot trail and a dead cougar.

Good Dogs, Hard Work Only Answer

They admit the predator control branch has done a terrific job on wolves and coyotes through the use of baited cyanide guns and strychnine-injected horse meat dropped on frozen lakes. But there is still only one answer to cougars—good dogs and hard work.

Trained hounds cost up to $500. With a $40 bounty they are willing to keep a couple of dogs and spend some time chasing the big cats. Some wouldn't stay with it for a $20 fee and thus less help would be available if there was another rash of cougar complaints such as we had several years back.

Results have shown that we must have the paid hunters—to answer public complaints of predators, and because of their specialized talents. Yet there may also be room for bonus hunters.

Vancouver Island is one of the last strongholds of the cougar. We may yet see it classed as a game animal and a prized trophy for both resident and tourist hunters. But as long as the cats are considered predators, the idea should be to fight them with the most effective method.

Although the bonus system may have been abused at times, the cougar population seems comparatively under control. And, to many, $40 isn't an excessive price to pay for an animal that may kill 50 deer a year.

BLUE BOMBERS COLLECT DAMAGES FROM BROWNS

WINNIPEG (BUP)—The Winnipeg Blue Bombers announced Tuesday night they have received a cash settlement "in five figures" from the Cleveland Browns for "interference" in 1955 with Bobby Freeman, former Auburn quarterback.

Jim Russell, president of the Western Football Conference club, refused to divulge the exact amount of the settlement which was made out of court after the Bombers threatened to sue the Browns for damage. But he indicated the sum bore a relationship to the $32,000 loss the Bombers incurred in 1955.

"This settlement should have a stabilizing effect on contract interference that can't help benefiting football as a whole," Russell said.

Freeman and Jack Locklear, another former Auburn player, did not live up to their contracts with Winnipeg in 1955. Russell said these violations contributed to the club's operating loss that season.

Halfway Defeat Mayo To Gain in Softball

Halfway House moved to within a single game of league-leading Gorge Hotel Tuesday night in Senior "A" Men's Softball League play at Central Park, when they clipped Mayo Lumber 6-4.

It was a close thing, with the Mayomen, who edged Gorge Sunday in an 18-inning marathon, leading 4-3 going into the bottom of the eighth.

In the bottom of the inning, Halfways rallied to score three runs on two hits, three walks, a sacrifice and a wild pitch, to pull the game out of the fire.

Winning pitcher was Stan Wargo, who went the route. Loser Albert Smith was taken out in the bottom of the eighth in favor of Brian McKinley.

Leading hitter for the visitors was Duff Chaster, who hit two for three, including a run-scoring triple in the sixth frame.

Mayo's lineup: 1. Duff Chaster, 2. Ray Wargo, 3. Albert Smith, 4. Brian McKinley, 5. Stan Wargo, 6. Norm Dickie.

Kiwanis Knots League Chase

North Kiwanis pulled the string that made the National Little League the most hotly contested minor baseball league in the city Tuesday night as they came back from behind to take a thriller 13-12 from Gyros at Jaycee Park.

Trailing 12-8 at the top of the fifth, the Kiwanians made the next two innings pay as they hammered home three in their half of the fifth and a pair in the sixth.

With the win, only a single game separates all four teams in the league with Gyros and Rotary tied for first place, and Old Fellows and North Kiwanis knotted in third.

In the Fairfield Little League, Britannia Branch drubbed ANAF Vets 13-4 to take a half-game league lead, while in the Saanich Babe Ruth League, Bapco Paint pulled even with front-running Brotherhood of Painters' team on the strength of a 9-8 win over Island Decorators at Reynolds Road Park.

Adding a half-game and pulling into a full-game lead in the Victoria Babe Ruth League Tuesday night were Menzies, when they downed Melrose Service 6-3 at Beacon Hill Park, as BCGE stretched their James Bay Little League lead to 3½ games with an 11-10 win over Victoria Sports at Macdonald Park.

At Bullen Park, Lions opened second half of the Esquimalt-Victoria West Little League by going down 7-4 to Lions.

Many Attracted By B.C. House

This is the last of two articles resulting from a survey of immigration from the United Kingdom, the state of the newcomers and their reactions to their new home.

By TONY DICKASON

British Columbia House in London is one of the main reasons so many persons of United Kingdom origin come here.

President of the Victoria Citizenship Council, pleasant, intelligent Mrs. H. L. Smith, who visited Britain last year and saw B.C. House in operation, has nothing but praise for this link with the motherland.

Of new arrivals, she said, "I've found they assimilate quickly and feel very much at home. After arrival we never hear anything more about them."

And what do newcomers think of this new abode?

Here are samples. Harry Wiles, aged 40, and his buddy, William Taylor, 30, came to Canada two years ago. They like it. Harry is a land registry office clerk, "clark" as he terms his vocation, and Bill is an auto mechanic. They live at 1463 Hamley.

Harry has been to Canada 14 times, in the merchant navy during the war. He's seen the East, but never the West, and the keynote city of the Canadian West is Victoria in their joint opinion.

"Victoria has a steady pace—none of the hurly-burly of the East."

They came here deliberately, with the thought held strongly they were going to fit in, and have done so.

But they believe a good 50 per cent of U.K. arrivals should never have left the homeland. "They haven't the ability to settle. Many retain their English attitude towards life which is all wrong here. I would advise them to go right back, people of this type."

Mr. Wiles blamed the Canadian immigration office, mentioning the one in Liverpool, as cause for a considerable amount of dissatisfaction among arrivals.

Insufficient Screening Alleged

Insufficient care is given, he said, to screen the people who want to come to Canada. The office, he stated, just doesn't tell the would-be immigrants what to expect, or what is going to happen once they arrive in Canada.

"They just don't bother." Again on the English attitude, Mr. Wiles, a man who has been around the world three times, said the type not wanted in Canada is the Englishman who believes everybody else is a foreigner.

"I don't go for this British flag-waving in someone else's country. There is no point in making unfavorable comparisons."

New arrivals, in trouble, bring it on themselves, he explained. Of the things Britons miss, football and pubs, for instance, the pair agreed that this was hardly the end-all of life.

A small subject, as such, since coming here the buddies have bought a small car, English, of course, which they jointly use, are buying their own house, have furniture, and both have money in the bank. They live "carefully, but well."

Most New Arrivals Credit Conscious

How are new U.K. arrivals regarding money?

Geoffrey Ellis, manager of the credit bureau here, said "they are far more conscientious than most native residents. They have a different attitude regarding credit. They realize they must pay, as some other persons here don't. Merchants agree on this, with few exceptions."

Charles Mills is a cost clerk. He lives in his own home at 2625 Shakespeare. He's 41, married, with no children, and is out of work. Charles and his wife Gladys came to Canada about five years ago, and after a few months in Toronto, hit on Victoria as the place in which they wanted to live.

"This is it," they said on arrival, and today "we wouldn't go anywhere else."

Mr. Mills is happy, even though presently without employment.

They own their home, with a slight mortgage outstanding, but the husband says "I've done in five years what it would have taken me 20 years to do in England."

They arrived here with $2.50 between them.

He disagreed with Mr. Wiles concerning the picture of Canada presented by immigration officials.

"We found what they told us what we would find."

Main trouble experienced by the household head is employment over age 40. "It's hard to get a job because of the pension schemes here," said the native of Bradford, Yorkshire. He is a cost clerk, and positions have been "spotty."

But despite this "we have done remarkably well."

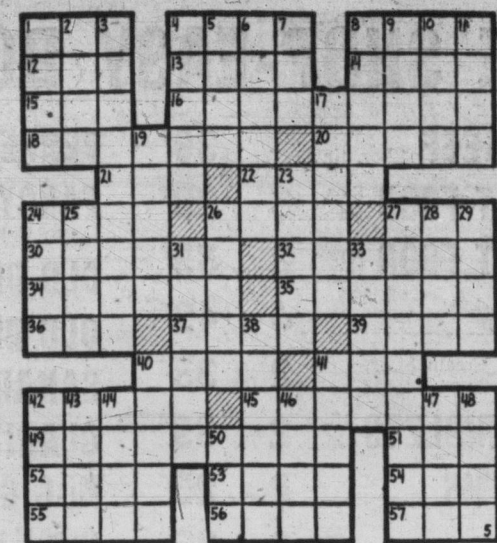

He has travelled, "all over the world with the R.A.F."

However, Mr. Mills misses the corner pub. Once weekly he goes downtown from his pretty home and has a few beers "but it's not really social. They bring the drinks and everybody downs them as fast as they can. I don't like that."

Main advantage, he said with a quick smile, is the fishing in this area.

"I go mostly to Brentwood. Yes, that is my main hobby. Fine fun."

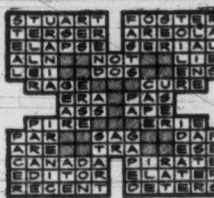

That's the UK new arrival situation. Know anything different?

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then Ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by you, and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngsters who win the first question answer will receive a 20-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia (Canadian edition) and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Address your questions to "Ask Andy," Victoria Daily Times.

Andy sends a complete, 15-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia, to Richard Hamblen, age 11, of Cleveland, Ohio, for his question:

How Many Kinds of Butterflies are There?

If you searched all over North America, you could find about 7,000 different butterflies and moths. In the whole world, well over one hundred thousand of these glamorous insects have been named and classified. But this is by no means all of them. Thousands of butterflies in faraway places are still waiting to be sorted and named. Right now, one of Andy's friends is in Africa with a camera and miles of color film. He hopes to add a few more of the tropical butterflies to the uncompleted list.

Though we cannot yet say exactly how many different butterflies exist in the world, we do know how to classify a stranger when we find him. Butterflies belong to the order of insects called Lepidoptera, which means the scaly-winged ones. Our eyes see a butterfly wing as a fragile scrap of gorgeous velvet and perhaps that long Latin name seems strange. It takes a microscope to show why butterflies are called under Lepidoptera, the scaly winged insects.

Under a powerful lens, a section of butterfly wing looks like a miniature city of skyscrapers made of clear plastic. The little buildings are the scales from which the order of insects gets its name. They are far finer than the finest dust. It is those little scales that give the butterflies their jeweled colors. For they act like prisms to split or refract the light and reveal the rainbow colors of which it is made. The Lepidoptera order of insects is divided into two sub-orders. The moths, who are the night flying cousins of the butterflies, have one sub-order to themselves. The butterflies belong to the sub-order Rhopalocera and even this strange name makes sense. It refers to the antennae of the butterfly insects and means club-horned. As you notice, the antennae of a butterfly are long and slender ending in little bumps, or clubs. So a butterfly is classified in the scaly-winged order and the club-horned sub-order.

This huge group of insects contains thousands and thousands of different butterflies. Sorting is simplified by dividing their numbers into about 75 smaller families. The members of each family are noticeably alike but different enough to rate as separate individuals. One of the most glamorous families in North America includes the swallow-tailed butterflies. These black and yellow or brown and yellow beauties with the swooping tails will play the star role in your butterfly collection. The little skippers that dart around the bushes belong to another family. These fellows resemble moths in that they rest with their wings outspread, but their club-horned antennae show that they are true butterflies.

The yellow or sulphur butterflies belong to still another family. The orange and brown angel wings belong to a family which includes the dark-winged mourning cloak butterfly. This family folds its beautiful wings in the fall and hibernates through the winter. They come out again in the spring sometimes before the winter snow has all melted.

In a proper butterfly collection, the specimens are mounted according to their separate families. A world-wide collection may contain 50,000 or more different varieties each mounted in one of the 75 or so separate families. But this would include only the named and classified butterflies. Someday it may grow to half a million or more.

Andy sends a Hammond's International World Globe to Stan Kolber, age 13, of Calgary, Alberta, for his question:

What is the Exact Speed of Sound?

Sound does not always travel at the same speed. It must have something to travel through and cannot pass through the nothingness of a vacuum. And it passes through some things faster than it passes through others. What's more, the temperature also affects its speed. It travels faster through warm things than through cold things.

The standard speed of sound, is through the air at a temperature of 0 degrees Centigrade. Under these rare conditions, it travels at 1,087 feet every second. It speeds up about two feet a second with each rising degree in temperature. At 30 degrees Centigrade, it whips through the air at about 1,147 feet a second.

The air, of course, is thin and filmy and sound can travel much faster through more dense materials. It whips through water at about 5,000 feet, or almost a mile, with every second, for water is somewhat denser than air. Through dense, heavy steel, sound can tear along at a speed of 16,500 feet, or more than three miles a second.

TRAFFIC SAFETY DRIVE PAYS OFF; DEATHS DROP

First dividends from B.C.'s stepped-up highway traffic safety program were evident last month. During April there were 10 traffic fatalities in the province, compared with 22 in the same month last year. It was one of the biggest improvements ever shown by Motor Vehicle Department records. And superintendent George Lindsay attributed it today to the increasing public concern over highway safety, especially in the last six months.

Three Plays Friday Night At Esquimalt

A program of three plays will be presented Friday night at Esquimalt High School, starting at 8 p.m. Miss Gwen Hewlings is directing all three, one of which is a humorous skit written by Esquimalt High student, Morlene Booth, at the age of 16.

This skit, "Who's What or What's Who," will have Gail Webb, Julian Reid and William McMillan in the cast.

Opening the program will be "Sleeping Dogs," the comedy entered by the school in this year's Schools Drama Festival. Helen Simenson, who won the best actress award on that occasion, will head the cast, which will include Marilyn Fenn, W. McMillan, Sandra Wolfe and Julian Reid.

Two visiting players, both former pupils of the school, will be principals in the final offering, scenes from "Macbeth." They are Gerald Guest who will play Macbeth, and Brian Mee, Helen Simenson and Marilyn Fenn complete the cast.

Esquimalt High choir, directed by Charles Ozard, will assist with several numbers during intermissions.

Bingo Profit Slim When Expenses Paid

There won't be much left in the kitty when expenses for Monday's Kinsmen-sponsored bingo game are met, president Stan Mossop said today.

Gross was about $14,700, realized from 6,200 players, and expenses will total $12,000. Prize list was $7,800, rent $1,000 for the Memorial Arena, the "big surprise" trip, $1,000, and provincial tax, $1,470.

"We hope to get about one-half the provincial tax back," said Mr. Mossop. Profits from the bingo will go to the Kinsmen Air Cadet Squadron, a non-profit venture.

(A PLUS) "OTHELLO"
(Odeon)—Employing some of the most beautiful and macabre color ever witnessed on the motion picture screen, plus some of the most spectacular sets ever erected, Russia's adaptation of William Shakespeare's tragedy "Othello" emerges as something unique in the annals of celluloid Shakespeare. It has a heart.

Through the noble acting of S. Bondarchuk (Othello), A. Popov (Iago), I. Skobtseva (Desdemona), and V. Sosulsky (Cassio), the 1955 Mosfilm production is a picture that can be enjoyed by all as something other than a classic for a classic's sake.

Whereas, so often, works by the Bard are calculated to please the drama theorists and what might be termed Shakespearean technicians, Russia's "Othello" is guaranteed to move the masses as a tragic love story. One cares that Othello slays Desdemona and then kills himself. One writhes at the treachery, the duplicity of Iago who has poisoned the dark-skinned Moor's mind against his fair wife. Even Britain's finest Shakespeare as woven by Sir Lawrence Olivier is no better than this. High praise, indeed.

THERE IS a flaw, however, in the great effort. And although it is a technical one, over which it would be impossible to have control, it is a considerable and must be recorded for, at times, it does steal from the enjoyment of the whole. It is the English dialogue dubbed into the speech of the Russian actors.

Not only do the lines, because of language differences, fail to mesh with movements of the lips. But there is a distinct impression, in some instances, that the voices chosen do not fit the actors. Somehow they seem to be out of character. This, and this only, prevented "Othello" from receiving a perfect score by this columnist.

magnificence. "Othello" leaves the Odeon tonight. However, it is to be hoped that it will return to town again this autumn. For "Othello" should be regarded as a must for all teachers and students and those who love Shakespeare—even for all those who enjoy drama in its finest form.

It is a privilege to again present this glorious film of pageantry and tradition to our patrons. For many reasons. First, it is a marvelous historical document, portrayed in all its intimacy and detail in beautiful Technicolor. The clarity of the photograph makes you feel that you are actually in attendance on this memorable occasion. Secondly, it commemorates the fourth anniversary of the Coronation itself and the fifth year of Her Majesty's reign. Thirdly, it will enable many to relive again their own trip overseas. Lastly, it may be the last opportunity to see this film before it is withdrawn from service. (See J. Arthur Rank letter in our box office.) A great and glorious program.

Juvenile Court Stays At Welfare Centre

A move to return Victoria and Saanich juvenile courts are conducted in the municipal halls.

Ald. G. I. Edgelow, who suggested the step as an economy measure at last council meeting, moved the matter be dropped following argument, by other aldermen and city welfare administrator William Hoosen.

Ald. Edgelow had pointed out earlier it costs the city $6,400 annually to maintain separate court for juveniles. Expenses had been much less when these cases were heard in city police court.

BACKWARD STEP

Welfare chairman Mrs. Lily Wilson, said she "strongly opposes such a backward step. It took us a long time to get away from the jail."

She related the case of a little girl brought from Vancouver as a police witness who had to stay in the city jail. She said youngsters often would boast about being in the adult jail, which had a bad psychological effect.

The separate juvenile court, she felt, was helpful in reducing second offences.

"If we can keep two children out of corrective institutions for one year your $6,000 is more than repaid."

Ald. E. D. McEwen and Mr. Hoosen both agreed. It was indicated the committee will support an anticipated drive by welfare organizations here to draw all district juvenile courts together and set up a domestic relations court in conjunction.

$200 Million Problem For Radar Line Chief

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

A. G. Lester, of the Bell Telephone Co. of Canada, is a man with a $200,000,000 problem.

He headed the telephone team responsible for the engineering and supervision of construction of the Mid-Canada Early Warning Line—the radar protection screen running along the 55th parallel.

Actual construction on the project is virtually complete, but Mr. Lester is still responsible to the Canadian government for seeing that it will work when in operation. Mr. Lester is one of the 150 delegates attending the 28th annual meeting of the Telephone Association of Canada at the Empress Hotel this week.

The Bell Telephone Co. acted as agent for the Trans-Canada Telephone System in engineering, planning and supervising construction of the radar screen for the government.

2,800 MILES

Mr. Lester points out that the Mid-Canada Line is a 2,800-mile string of isolated radar stations stretching across Canada.

"It is the biggest single project handled by Bell's special contract department," he said. "This was formed in 1953 to deal with defence communication projects for the government."

Mr. Lester said certain features of the Mid-Canada project are under security "wraps". The main stations consist of groups of 15 to 20 buildings and, in some cases, air strips.

"Intermediate stations are small and are designed to be operated eventually on an unattended basis."

TRANSIT PROBLEM

The biggest problem encountered during construction was that of transporting materials to the sites.

"During the winter of 1954-55, some 11,000 tons of material were carried by tractor-trains on a day-and-night basis," he said.

The micro-wave relay system now being built across Canada is under discussion at the telephone conference.

"The present wire system across Canada is approaching the point where it will not be able to handle the telephone traffic on long-distance calls," says Stuart R. Muirhead, of Regina.

At present micro-wave is complete and in use in Regina and work to extend it further west is proceeding daily. When finished it will be capable of handling 600 additional telephone conversations or one television broadcast and 120 conversations at one time.

Help for Cupid

New Phone Cable Link With Britain

A new cable to cope with ever-increasing traffic between Canada and Britain was announced here Tuesday by Douglas F. Bowie, president of Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation, Montreal.

"We need a new cable to augment the recently completed trans-Atlantic cable from Newfoundland to England," Mr. Bowie told the 28th annual meeting of the Telephone Association of Canada at the Empress Hotel.

He added that experience gained from the existing cable, which was opened last fall, had pointed to the need for additional circuits.

"The quality of voice transmission is so good and the public need so great that the six circuits assigned to Canada in the original cable filled up immediately," Mr. Bowie said.

"At present during peak business hours there is never a spare minute. We must therefore provide more trans-Atlantic telephone facilities of the same high quality to meet the demand, which will increase with the continuing growth of Canada."

Socred Movement Called 'Fascist'

The Social Credit movement was branded "outright fascist" by Victoria CCF candidate Victor Williams at an election meeting Tuesday night.

"I'm not only accusing Social Credit of being fascist," he said in his address at Woodsworth Hall, "I say they are fascist."

To back his charge, the candidate quoted certain statements which, he said, were made by Solon Low in the House of Commons, and reviewed the history of the Socred movement in Alberta.

Mr. Williams quoted the na-

Sidney Plan For Schools In Dispute

A resolution calling for abolition of industrial arts courses in public schools, to be submitted to the 39th annual meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island June 18-19 at Sooke, is expected to be strongly opposed by Victoria delegates.

The resolution is being submitted by the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce.

Forrest L. Shaw, chairman of the Victoria chamber's civic affairs group, said if such a resolution was approved by the government it would place B.C. schools 50 years behind all other educational systems in North America and Europe.

"This is a technical age," he said. "We need skilled technicians."

Mr. Shaw said B.C. is lagging behind other provinces as it was in its industrial arts program.

He said one of the reasons immigrants are being encouraged to come to "Canada is because the country lacks technicians.

The Sidney and North Saanich resolution also called for are abolition of home economics, physical education and drama classes. It described the subjects as wasteful for both teachers and students.

Canada Asks Warning On Freight Rate Hikes

OTTAWA (CP)—The board of transport commissioners Tuesday asked the United States Interstate commerce commission to give Canada 30 days' notice on freight rate increases affecting international traffic.

The board said in a statement the purpose of the request is to protect Canadian shippers from any sudden and unexpected increase without adequate notice.

International freight rates are mainly joint rates agreed to between Canadian and American railways, with little or no account of the international boundary.

tional Social Credit leader as saying in the House of Commons on Feb. 3, 1947:

"It is my belief and the belief of those in this group of the House that any time the government sets out to achieve as its major conscious objective full employment, social security or a planned economy, that the government is going straight down the road to the slavery of the people."

CENSOR PRESS

He recalled that the late Premier Aberhart and his government at one time tried to censor the press. The excuse was given at the time that this was being done to protect the public from reading lies, he said.

"The same thing occurred in Germany and the same excuse was given," said Mr. Williams.

Mr. Williams drew attention to the promise made by the Socred government in Alberta that it would give every person a $25 dividend.

In Germany, he said, Hitler used the same tactics. He promised his people that if his party was elected they would each get a Volkswagen.

"The intent was the same," he said. "The purpose was to gain votes and power."

HOODWINKERS

There was no party in Canada, he said, which has been so successful as the Social Credit in hoodwinking the people into believing that it stood to protect the average man from being exploited.

"They are the friends and supporters of big business," he said.

Referring to the Liberals, Mr. Williams said they would soon unite with the socialistic movement because it had adopted their principles.

He charged the B.C. Social Credit government with doing nothing to alleviate the shortage of beds in hospitals.

"They are going to spend a $1,000,000 on building a new Government House for two persons," he said. "I'm certain that St. Joseph's Hospital with its shortage of space and rising operating costs would gladly accept that $1,000,000."

Arthur Turner, CCF MLA for Vancouver East, spoke in support of Mr. Williams.

He said the CCF believed that the proposed Mica Dam power development should be a public project.

SHORTER LIFE (COUGH) BEATS LIFE (WHEEZE) WITHOUT CIGARETS

By DINAR KERR

Seven Victorians live up cigars, cigars and pipes today and through a fine haze of smoke laughed at death.

Their tobacco-stained hands didn't even twitch as they received the news that heavy smoking would cut their life expectancy by seven or eight years.

Furthermore, according to an American Cancer Society study, regular cigarette smokers die from lung cancer 10 times more frequently than non-smokers and run a greater risk of fatal coronary heart disease. (See story, page 31.)

The eighth Victorian, non-smoker Bill Archer of 1404 Esquimalt Road, adopted an "I told you so" attitude.

"I used to smoke two or three packages a day," he said. "This is a true story, so help me God. I smoked one right after another. One night I couldn't sleep. I was all nerves. My wife said to me, 'Why don't you give up cigars, my dear.' So I did. That was five years ago and let me tell you for a while I nearly snatched cigars from people's mouths.

But I'm 82 now and I don't miss them a bit."

The seven smokers inhaled the information in one deep drag and breathed out nothing but courage.

Only C. H. Ruttan of 1167 St. David Street admitted certain misgivings. He smokes a package of cigars a day.

"Hey, I guess I'd better slow down," he said. He considered his cigarette briefly. "I'll cut down by one-quarter," he said. "I'd like to figure on an extra two years anyway."

Cigar-smoker Rudolph van den Brink of 1422 Newport took the news with a careless smile.

"Would you give up driving a car because it could shorten your life?" he asked. "I used to smoke 10 to 12 cigars a day and my health was excellent. I just cut down a bit because I can't always get the right brand."

Alex Hutcheson, Cordova Bay Road, began smoking a pipe when he was 15 and he's still breathing in fumes at 74.

"When the Lord is ready for me to die, I'll die," he said shortly. "That's all there is to it. Everybody dies and it doesn't matter what you die of."

Cleaver Wilson of 5319 Parker wouldn't say how many cigarettes he smokes a day, but whatever it is, he won't cut it by one puff.

"If you go through life worrying about all the things that could kill you, you won't enjoy it very much," he said. "I have lots more things that scare me day by day than the thought that I might die eight years before the non-smokers."

Women smokers go along with the theory, "smoke while you can—tomorrow you may die."

"The idea of death doesn't bother me at all," said Miss Vida Morley, 224 Crease. "I'm so curious about the hereafter that I can't wait to get there."

She goes through about 15 cigarettes a day and smokes filter-tips because "I don't like bits of tobacco in my mouth."

Miss Helen Moran, of 1114 Rockland, doesn't worry about the death-dealing effects of smoking either.

"I might give up cigars today and slip on a banana peel and die tomorrow," she said. "Smoking probably has a bad effect on my health but I haven't noticed it. The doctors may have a point, but so what?"

Mrs. Wilma Jenkins of 947 Inskip summed it up like a true smoker.

"I've been hearing about this subject for quite a while," she said. "And I've given it a lot of thought."

"But I don't give up smoking. We have to die sometime of something, don't we?"

Victoria Daily Times

MONTE ROBERTS

Mr. Chairman, honored guests, ladies and gentlemen. It is indeed a privilege to appear before this distinguished gathering, and to be given the opportunity to say a few words about the organization which I have the honor to represent.

The organization which I have the honor to represent, ladies and gentlemen, is the Society for the Prevention Of.

It is quite possible you have not heard of the Society for the Prevention Of, as this is a comparatively new organization.

In fact, it is so new it hasn't been formed as yet. But the Society for the Prevention Of fills a much needed need in the city of Victoria.

In fact, the Society for the Prevention Of will, in time, become a great force for good in the province of British Columbia, the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Nations, and even Oak Bay.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I wish to make it clear that there is no more democratic organization in the world than the Society for the Prevention Of.

Members of the society have complete freedom of choice with regard to what they wish to be in favor of the prevention of.

Within the framework of this great organization, a member can stand firmly for the prevention of changing the Fountain Circle, while another member is encouraged to work for the prevention of retaining the Fountain Circle.

In this truly democratic group you will find members cheering on the prevention of landfill garbage disposal and other members enthusiastically attempting to prevent dumping of garbage at sea.

Naturally, ladies and gentlemen, we expect there will be times when all members of the Society for the Prevention Of will stand together as one unit.

The Society's standing committee on looking out for anything that might get things done is ever watchful, ladies and gentlemen.

And as soon as there is any danger of anything that might get things done, the Society will, of course, work together to prevent it.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I urge your support for this great, progressive organization—one which, I am sure, will flourish in this area—the Society for the Prevention Of.

YOUTH STATUE 'UNSUITABLE' Women Claim

The fuss over the B.C. Centennial Committee's "Symbol of Youth" statue project has been stirred up again by members of the Lake Hill Women's Institute.

At a meeting this week the women expressed strong disapproval of the proposal to erect one of three modernistic statues on the Legislative Building lawn next year.

"We feel it is unsuitable, and definitely not in keeping with the architecture of the buildings," said secretary Mrs. Alice M. Buchanan.

Final decision on the project is still up in the air and will stay there until the federal election is over and the warring provincial cabinet gets back together again.

The cabinet will be asked to approve a Centennial Committee recommendation, following selection of three finalists from 40 entries submitted in the province-wide contest.

Each of the three sculptors, including Herbert Slesner of Victoria whose model is pictured above, received a $250 prize.

The committee is presumed to have recommended that one of the three be commissioned for $20,000 to execute a large-scale statue to put up in front of the buildings.

However, it left the door open to dropping the project altogether.

Fall Fatal To City Man At Alberni

Wilfred Smith, 40, 2124 Quimper, Victoria, died in Port Alberni early today of injuries suffered in a fall at 2.30 p.m. Tuesday.

According to reports Mr. Smith, a foreman iron worker was employed in construction of a new wood room at the extension to the MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. pulp mill in Port Alberni when he fell a distance of 40 feet.

Midway through his fall the back of his head struck a metal pipe. He was taken to West Coast General Hospital, where he died at 4.10 a.m. today. It was understood he never regained consciousness.

His wife spent the night at his bedside. An inquest will be called by Dr. N. H. Jones, coroner, but no date has been set.

NAVAL SHIP MOVEMENTS

Sussexvale, Ste. Theres, New Glasgow, return June 10, 4 p.m.

Oshawa returns June 13.

Skeena, Athabaskan, Cayuga, Stettler on recall exercise.

RCMP BRAVERY MARKED

Commendations to four members of RCMP in B.C. were announced today by Assistant Commissioner C. W. Harvison for acts of bravery in November, 1955.

Personal commendations go out to Const. Laurence Martin and Const. A. T. Millhouse, both of Haney detachment, for their part in the rescue of three persons from the flooded Alouette River, near Haney, Nov. 3, 1955.

Cpl. K. M. McHale, Invermere detachment and Const. H. D. Bowyer, then of Invermere, were commended for their part in the rescue of A. E. Portman, an employee of Columbia Gypsum Co., Windermere, who was buried in a hopper full of gypsum rock, Nov. 29, 1955.

Stranded Mrs. Hedy Woriano, her small daughter and Kenneth Bruce were stranded in the flooded Alouette River and Constables Millhouse and Martin struggled through the debris-filled river to help them.

Mr. Bruce was in the fork of a swaying tree inches from being swept into the stream, and Mrs. Woriano with her daughter clutched a log in the river.

Const. Martin swam to the mother and child and prevented them from being carried away while Const. Millhouse went for aid.

He worked his way back up the river and to a 300-yard life-line previously stretched across the torrent.

Under Water It was mostly submerged when he got to it and to cross it he had to remain under water most of the time.

He was able to secure further aid and the rescue of the three civilians and Const. Martin was completed with the aid of army personnel and searchlights after dark.

Frozen Tomb Cpl. McHale and Const. Bowyer were part of a team of 40 men and two doctors who dug the gypsum worker from what could have been a frozen tomb after he fell through a crust of rock and frost into a 12-foot hopper, several feet of rock closing in over him.

The two policemen and civilian John Kroepff went into the hopper and began digging. Kroepff noticed a wall of frozen rock beginning to cave in on the rescuers and spread-eagled himself on the mass.

Const. Bowyer, in shirt sleeves, threw himself against Kroepff to hold back the slide for 15 hours until Portman was rescued. The constable later contracted pneumonia.

Only Victoria Felt Raindrops

In all the Pacific Northwest, only Victoria was able to boast a shower at noon, substitute weatherman Frank Williams said today at Gonzales Observatory.

"There was no rain to the north, and none to the east," he said. There is the likelihood of more rain tonight, he said, but Thursday will be "mainly sunny."

Temperatures will range between 52 degrees tonight and 68 degrees Thursday.

CITY MOVES ON NEED FOR LIFEGUARDS

Victoria will engage a lifeguard for Thetis Lake "as soon as possible" city engineer J. C. Garnett said today.

The move indicated a change in policy from last year when the lifeguard went on duty in mid-July.

Decision followed a public works meeting at City Hall which discussed the growing need for protection as outlined in Tuesday's Times.

Victoria-Saanich Beaches and Parks Committee, meeting tonight, was slated to discuss the matter also. Chairman, Coun. S. W. Brock of Saanich, said he would propose immediate lifeguard protection for three beaches at Beaver and Elk Lakes.

Works committee today received a request from parks committee for $2,000 additional funds for expenditure at Thetis Lake.

Ald. J. Donald Smith moved it be transferred with the recommendation a lifeguard be hired immediately due to the increased number of people drawn to local beaches by current warm weather.

The motion concerning a lifeguard was declared unnecessary as the matter is within jurisdiction of the city engineer, who doubles as water commissioner in charge of Thetis.

False Security Mr. Garnett pointed out he believed lifeguards should be provided by concessionaires in city-owned parks. He added, he did not think one guard could adequately cover a crowded beach. He thought it might create a false sense of security.

ARE YOU CONFUSED?

Confused about what riding you vote in next Monday? It's really quite simple.

If you live in the municipalities of Esquimalt, Victoria, or Oak Bay, then you are in the Victoria federal riding.

The second local constituency, Esquimalt-Saanich, takes in all of the Saanich Peninsula, Colwood, Langford, and the whole Lower Island bounded by Port Renfrew on the west and just above Cobble Hill on the north.

There is one exception: the so-called Saanich "panhandle," which is included in Victoria riding. This is the portion of Saanich lying south of North Dairy Road.

How do you know if you can vote?

First and foremost, you must be on the voters' list. Except for the rural section of Esquimalt-Saanich riding where unregistered voters can be vouched for at the polling station, if you're not on the list you're out of luck.

Generally, the rule on eligibility of a voter is that he or she must be a Canadian citizen or other British subject—that includes immigrants from Eire—21 years old by polling day and resident in Canada for the year immediately preceding the election date.

You are also required to vote in the riding of your "ordinary residence."

That is, if your home is in Nanaimo and you are visiting here on a business or pleasure trip you must return to Nanaimo to vote. There is no absentee poll.

If you are in doubt as to the polling station where you vote, it is posted in the top right-hand corner of the voters' list mailed out by the returning officer.

A number of candidates have also mailed out cards to registered voters telling them which polling station they should go to.

Smith Torpedoes Traffic Plan

One-Way Streets Stand Reversed

A last-minute switch by Ald. J. Donald Smith today shattered hopes that a one-way traffic plan would be tried on a trial basis to improve the Fountain Circle.

The alderman, who previously pressed, consistently for adoption of the Faustman one-way plan, today recommended all plans be shelved for 10 years and the infamous traffic circle left as it is.

"Write letters to Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer," he told council public works committee, "tell them we are sorry we spent your money and we are right back where we started."

Ald. Hugh Ramsay recommended public works committee ask council to try the one-way proposal on a temporary basis.

"There had been hope council would approve. Ald. Ramsay, Ald. E. D. McEwen, Ald. M. H. Mooney and Ald. Smith had indicated they were in favor. One more yes vote would have given them a majority and a positive attempt to end the conflict of ideas would have been under way."

Mayor Percy Scourrah had indicated he might cast a yes vote. He said he had come to realize the one-way plan might be the only solution. He was almost certain he would support a trial.

Other council members are opposed to a one-way street system, except for Ald. Mrs. Lily Wilson who is apparently undecided.

Oak Bay Breakwater Supported by 2,500

The Victoria Outboard Club, pumping for a breakwater project to protect Oak Bay boat-house moorings, has collected approximately 2,500 names on a petition in support of the project.

The club, at its annual meeting Tuesday night, decided to turn the names over to Oak Bay council for presentation to the federal government.

The club also approved a motion that each federal election candidate here be sent a letter requesting his support for the breakwater.

Frank Baylis was elected commodore and H. Adams, commodore last year, was elected vice-commodore by acclamation. Secretary, Wilf Hughes and treasurer Reg Williams both were re-elected.

The club, which met at 848 Yates Street, also spent considerable time discussing the possibility of building a private launching site at Shawnigan Lake. A committee will check on lease rights and access to the lake, and further action is expected at a meeting in the near future.

The club also discussed speeding in the yacht basin at Oak Bay and racing at Langford Lake. It was felt that while club members generally observe speed regulations, the greatest offenders are certain "irresponsible persons" who do not belong to any club.

The club feels a speed limit of four miles per hour be set and that signs be posted at various points in the yacht basin to remind all boaters. The club approved a motion that Oak Bay's chief of police be sent a letter stating the club's stand in the matter.

The outboard members also said they would be willing to erect no speeding signs "at our own expense."

Next club event will be a cruise to Sidney Spit on June 9. Approximately 30 members attended Tuesday's meeting.

Funeral Thursday For Newspaperman

Funeral services for Edward McLean, Times news editor, who died suddenly Monday evening at his home, 763 Hampshire Road, will be held Thursday at 3.30 p.m. at McCall's chapel.

Rev. W. W. McPherson, DD, will officiate, and pallbearers will be Harold Lupton, Leslie Benson, William Walker, Gordon Forbes, Lloyd Baker and Leslie Fox. Interment will be at Royal Oak Burial Park.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Will you please tell me the location of the stone which commemorates the landing here of Douglas, afterwards so important a figure in B.C.R.A.L.

A. The stone is at Clover Point. The inscription on its plaque reads: "This 10-acre park extends west to Beacon Hill Park. Sir James Douglas, first governor of British Columbia, landed here in 1842 to select a site for the Hudson's Bay Company fort in Victoria, 1843. It was used for a rifle range from 1899 to 1931 and leased in 1947 for 99 years from the Crown by the City of Victoria."

The plaque was erected by the city in 1955.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to The Times, addressed to "Ask The Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums.

Ungrateful Snaps— Turn Out as Weeds

By PENNY SAVER

Earlier this spring I found a whole plantation of sturdy-looking little plants flourishing in the garden. "Good, volunteer snapdragons," I thought and transplanted them to the front border where I have been nursing them along with the most tender care. Then suspicion dawned. Flower buds appeared, and they are like no snapdragons I've ever seen. They're not quite in flower yet so I'm not sure what particular kind of weed they are, but I do know that those plants have abused my trust—they are definitely NOT snapdragons.

So I took myself off to a garden shop to see what I could find in the way of replacements, and I was very lucky—they had the most gorgeous pansies I've seen, at eight plants for $1, which I think is very reasonable considering how pansies seed themselves and form a lovely plantation.

There is the widest assortment of colors to choose from, and since each plant has at least one lovely big frilled bloom on it already, you're sure of what you're getting.

They also have nice big snapdragons for 50¢ a dozen, but I've had enough of snapdragons and pseudo-snapdragons. I was more taken with the assortment of different types of French marigolds at the same price. They are all in bloom and what a bright spot of color they'd make in a border.

There were sturdy-looking zinnias, too, also 50¢. I didn't need any myself, as I have grown mine from seed—both of them.

FOR GARDEN MEALS

While I'm talking about gardens, I must mention some very useful trays. They're good-sized oblong ones made of pressed fiberglass, very light and, practically unbreakable. Just the thing for serving cold drinks, or a picnic meal in the garden.

The one I saw was pastel rose with a design of gold paint dribbled across it, but they also come in pastel green, black and other shades. Price is $7.50.

ROMANTIC LIGHT

In the same store, I noticed terra cotta terrace lamps from Mexico. These are really quite unique—they're about a yard high, in three tiers, and each

Choice Between Home, Career Source of Conflict, Tension

VANCOUVER (CP)—The rival claims of home and career cause conflict at almost every stage of a woman's life, Marion Royce told a Young Women's Christian Association meeting Monday night.

Miss Royce, who for years was secretary for social and international questions for the world organization of the YWCA, was one of three panelists who discussed bringing up young persons at the YWCA's annual convention at the University of British Columbia.

The other panel members were Professor Isabel Laird, assistant professor of psychology at Queen's University, and Mrs. J. E. Houck, of Brampton, Ont.

Miss Royce said unresolved tensions between the claims of home and career cause conflict in women's lives at almost every stage.

"The teen-age girl is apt to feel she must choose between marriage and a career," said Miss Royce. "She is likely to prefer marriage. Therefore preparation for work mother or as an employed worker, takes second place in her thinking and she is poorly prepared for any job she may undertake later on."

A vocational interest should be kept alive at every stage in a woman's life, Miss Royce said. Usually a period of work should be followed by education. Sometimes it continues during marriage. And a provincial Liberal candidate in after children have been reared, 1935, Mrs. Houck criticized women there should be a later period during which a woman can enrich and not enervating fields they conquer experience through voluntary side belong to men.

Is Colored Linen Too Bold for Formal Dinner?

Must table linen for a formal dinner be white or off-white, or can there be colors, either bright or pastel? Are place mats used for formal dinners?

Louise Davis Answers

The color of linen for a formal dinner is a matter of opinion and personal choice. I am one who thinks that a table can be exquisite with, for example, a Louise Davis bright green cloth and napkins, providing the entire picture is pleasing and artistic. I'm sure that even the most meticulous and conservative guests wouldn't frown upon color, especially if the hostess can achieve elegance without being gaudy. One should give considerable thought in planning a table for a formal dinner.

The china pattern, glassware and centrepiece would have to be just right in relation to each other. The decor of the surroundings should also be given consideration. A dinner table can be a work of art. There are gradations of formal table settings, some ultra, others not too ultra, yet still formal. Linen in white or off-white is always safe. Even if it is a must for some, that shouldn't influence others who would like to go in for color. Place mats can also be used for an "almost formal" dinner. Here, too, the same thought should be given to achieve a beautiful result. However, the trend at the moment seems to be in favor of the tablecloth.

Grandmother's Silver Prayer Book Carried by Happy Bride

Richly brocaded ivory taffeta styled on simple classic lines created a bridal gown for Katharine Ann Burnett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Burnett, 2397 Musgrave Street, who exchanged marriage vows with Thomas Barton Howes, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Howes, 2321 Cook Street, Saturday evening in St. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay.

Rev. H. J. Jones performed the ceremony in a setting of late spring flowers in bright multi-tones. Guest pews were marked with nosegays of yellow roses.

To complement her gown the bride chose a fingertip veil of ivory and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses in which was placed her maternal grandmother's silver prayer book. She was given in marriage by her father.

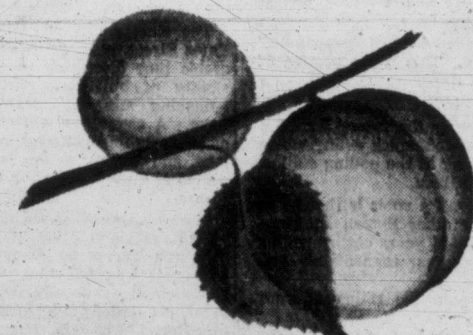

As maid of honor, Miss Susan V. Burnett wore a gown of violet blue nylon sheer over crisp white organdy, sprinkled with yellow carnations. Bridesmaid Miss Irene M. Burnett was gown in white organdy embellished with yellow roses posed over apple green taffeta, and her bouquet was mauve carnations. Both gowns featured very full skirts.

Mr. Keith Littler was best man, and ushers were Mr. J. Campbell, Mr. W. McLean and A. Snowsell.

Yellow roses decorated Uplands Golf Club for the reception, at which the newlyweds were assisted in receiving their guests by the bride's mother, wearing a cocoa-toned brocade sheath gown, and the groom's mother, in a gown of smoke blue lace.

R. Hawkes proposed the toast to the bride, and the young couple cut a wedding cake which had been decorated by

Marriage Vows Said In Floral Setting

Snapdragons and iris formed a charming early summer setting for the wedding in St. John's Anglican Church of Barbara Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold E. Vaughan, 741 Audley Street, and Douglas Harry, son of Mrs. Mary Mills, 1747 Fort Street. Rev. Canon George Biddle officiated, and traditional organ music was played.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of chantilly lace and sheer white nylon net. Over the lace bodice, she wore a matching jacket featuring a Medici collar and lily-point sleeves, and the bouffant skirt of net was inset with lace.

Her nylon illusion veil touched with embroidery, misted from a headdress of pleated nylon tulle and sequins, and her bouquet was a cascade of red roses and white carnations.

Mrs. Richard Ritchie, the groom's sister, wore a pink net ballerina-length gown and carried a fan of blue carnations. Similar gowns in blue with fans of pink carnations were chosen by the bridesmaids, Miss Sharon Vaughan, sister of the bride, and Miss Donna Hopkins. Russell Coleman was best man, and guests were shown to pews marked by marguerites, by Ar-—Iris were banked at the front of Gorge Presbyterian Church to form the setting for the ceremony performed by Rev. T. H. McAllister. Traditional organ music was played, and Mrs. E. Whitney-Griffiths was soloist.

The bride looked lovely in her ballerina-length gown of delicate white, crystal-embroidered tulle. She wore a large white picture hat, and carried a white Bible on which was placed an orchid.

She was attended by Mrs. S. Browne, who chose turquoise crystal-embroidered gown. She wore a white hat, and her flowers were gardenias. Best man was Ronald Child, and ushers were Alex Pearson and Al Browne.

At a reception, the newlyweds cut a wedding cake which was placed in a setting of tulle and yellow rosebuds. The bride's toast was proposed by Mervin Fishley. ## New Kabob Twist for Outdoor Eats Gather the clan together, move out to the backyard for food and fun. Be sure the food is hearty and satisfying because fresh air perks up appetites. An interesting main dish for outdoor eating is an orange and meat kabob. . . orange slices alternated with tiny meat balls on a skewer. Brushed with a lemon caper sauce, these kabobs will become the specialty of your house! Try it and you'll be convinced.

ORANGE AND MEAT BALL KABOBS

One pound ground beef or hamburger, 1 egg, beaten; 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1/4 cup finely chopped onions, 1 tablespoon soy sauce, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, dash of allspice; 1/2 cup bread crumbs, 1/2 cup brown sugar, 6 oranges peeled and cut in slices or bite-size pieces.

Add brown sugar to orange slices, allow to set while preparing meat balls. Mix remaining ingredients until well blended. Form into 24 little balls. When ready to barbecue, thread beef balls on metal skewers, alternately with orange slices. Brush well with lemon caper sauce and broil. Brush frequently with sauce during barbecuing process.

LEMON CAPER SAUCE

One-half cup fresh lemon juice, 1/2 cup salad oil, 1/4 teaspoon celery salt, 1 tablespoon chopped capers, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 1/2 teaspoon marjoram, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1/2 teaspoon salt.

Mix all ingredients together and stir until sugar is dissolved. Set for several hours or overnight to allow flavors to blend.

It's summertime and the outdoor fireplaces and grills are again the dinner time gathering places for many families and friends. Make the occasion a festive one by serving something different in that ever popular delicacy—the kabob.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Older Folks Urged to Look To Grooming and Fashions

One of the most interesting not attributes of the young alone.

Miss Quimby called attention to the fact that there are now 14 1/2 million people past 65 in the United States and that it is estimated that this number will increase to 21 million by 1970. It seems to me that the future certainly belongs to age as well as to youth especially in light of current medical strides to make middle and older age more vital, to prolong the youthful portion of life.

Following are a few quotations from the address of Albert J. Abrams, director of the New York State Joint Legislative Committee on Problems of Aging. Mr. Abrams said, "America's older people need to throw off the black garb of defeatism and despair into which a youth-gear civilization has cast them."

Also, "Grandma should not dress like Marilyn Monroe but the new look for senior citizens must call for dignity, not despair, or optimism, not retreat. A new wardrobe at 60 will make one feel like 40 and a sparkling dress or hair style will act like one of the new miracle energizers."

It seems to me that those are ringing inspirational and fundamental words which need to be said over and over again. People think themselves into old age and adopt the black dreary attire to match it. I have been harassing my readers for years to get out of the black habit. Many mature women wear it like a uniform. Colors do wonders not only for your skin and hair but for your spirit.

On the second day of Senior Citizens' month, A. Bernice Quimby, federation executive editor said that the purpose of meeting was "to stimulate public interest in the clothing and grooming needs of a dramatically expanding older age population, and to emphasize to older people themselves that attractiveness and charm are

BRIDGE LESSON

By Oswald Jacoby

South won the opening spade lead with his jack and led the 10 of diamonds. East looked dummy over carefully and decided that the only way to beat the three-trump contract would be to develop a club trick.

The way to develop that club trick would be to lead the suit and East made the unusual but correct lead of the club jack.

Dummy's king won that trick and a second diamond was played and won by East's ace. Now East led the deuce of clubs and it did not matter what declarer did.

West's queen of clubs or East's ace of hearts. This was mighty good defence by East but he had been lucky in his choice of opponents.

North and South were using the weak no-trump and North was unable to open one no-trump as a normal play would have.

This resulted in getting the play in the wrong hand. If North had opened with the standard one no-trump South would have raised to three with nine points plus two tens and three nines.

East would probably have opened the deuce of clubs whereupon it would be all over for the defence. If East selected his fourth best heart or diamond he would have the chance to make the killing jack of clubs lead later on.

Maybe he would have figured it out also but it was much easier with the strong hand face up on the table.

Smokers Dying Younger Cancer Study Shows

NEW YORK (UP)—Cigarette smoking and premature death were coupled today in the final report on a massive four-year statistical study of 188,000 male smokers and non-smokers conducted by the American Cancer Society.

Death rates from all causes were higher among the smokers than among the non-smokers. The rates rose consistently in proportion to the amount of smoking. Among men who smoked one-half pack—(10 cigarettes)—a day or less, the death rate was 34 per cent higher than among non-smokers. Among smokers of one-half to one pack a day, it was 70 per cent higher, among one to two packs a day smokers it was 96 per cent higher, and it was 123 per cent higher for men who smoked two or more packs a day.

The report was presented by Drs. E. Cuyler-Hammond and Daniel Horn at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association here.

The statistical rundown showed that 10 times more smokers than non-smokers had died of lung cancer during the five-year period of the study.

The death rate from heart and circulatory diseases was 70 per cent higher among smokers than the rate statistically expected among non-smokers. Deaths from lung diseases other than cancer were three times more numerous among cigarette smokers than among non-smokers, and deaths from pneumonia and influenza were almost four times higher.

The report also found that male smokers were seven times more susceptible to death from cancer of the esophagus, larynx, mouth, tongue and the back of the throat than non-smokers. As for stomach ulcers, 51 men of the 188,000 studied died from this cause, and all were smokers, 46 of cigarettes, two of pipes, two of cigars and one of both pipes and cigars.

As for pipe and cigarette smokers: the over-all death rate was 12 per cent higher for pipe smokers than among non-smokers and 22 per cent higher for cigar smokers than non-smokers.

Only in the following categories were the death rates for smokers and non-smokers approximately the same: violence, suicide, chronic rheumatic fever, hypertensive heart disease, other hypertensive diseases, nephritis and nephrosis, diabetes, leukemia and cancers of the rectum, colon and brain.

Tax Exemption Asked On Children's Clothes

NANAIMO (CP)—The Ladies' Auxiliary of the B.C. Command,

Canadian Legion, passed a resolution Tuesday urging abolition of the 5 per cent sales tax on children's clothing and shoes.

The auxiliary, in convention here, suggested cards be issued children allowing them exemption.

B.C. Command president Mrs. A. McDonald of Victoria said the tax has not been lifted because, in the case of school-age girls, a student's clothes often might fit the mother.

The convention also decided to appeal to the federal government urging that individuals on war veterans' allowance be entitled to receive the allowance when living outside Canada for reasons of health.

Next year's convention will be held in Powell River.

Election Race In Exciting Home Stretch

(From Times' News Services)

Political leaders and followers of all party stripes and colors are charging down the home stretch in the election race with the finishing line, the polling booths, next Monday, only five days away and the purse, control of Canada's government.

Here is how the running looked today:

'NO ORDERS'—ST. LAURENT

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent says he did no wrong in asking the armed forces to vote Liberal on June 10.

But even if he had, he would continue as an "unrepentant sinner" until voting day urging all Canadians to support Liberal candidates if they feel such support would be good for the country.

The Liberal Leader, launching his final appeal for Ontario's vote, replied Tuesday to John Diefenbaker's criticism of his armed forces vote appeal letter at two rallies at Brockville and St. Catharines.

Mr. St. Laurent said he had invited—not ordered—servicemen to vote for the Liberals. He had read of Mr. Diefenbaker's statements with "great horror." He had done no wrong.

"To have anyone say that the letter amounted to ordering the armed forces to vote Liberal must be quite as repugnant to the members of the armed forces as it would be to any other citizen," Mr. St. Laurent said.

The prime minister winds up his Ontario tour with a monster rally in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Friday evening.

Mr. St. Laurent spoke at Brockville before an outdoor crowd of more than 400 at noon. At the night rally at St. Catharines where a crowd of about 1,000 filled the high school auditorium, Mr. St. Laurent launched into an extemporaneous address on Canada's history and economic future, the need for land reform and military strength.

Mr. Diefenbaker, he said, had described himself as a pessimist. He was being aided in his Ontario campaign by Premier Frost. But a booklet issued by the Frost government had tended to support the Liberal party's contention that Canada had prospered under a Liberal administration.

The booklet reviewing the 1956 economy said Canada had broken economic records. It was "a pretty good testimonial" to progress which had coincided with a Liberal administration, and that the Frost government in its booklet had stated the pipeline was a good thing for Ontario.

"One clergyman was worth 10 policemen" in maintaining respect for order in any community. "I said that when I was minister of Justice 10 years ago, and I believe it is as true today as it was then," the Prime Minister remarked.

Canada would not sacrifice its wheat surplus on world markets, Mr. St. Laurent said he believed that ultimately the surplus would be sold for the kind of currency which could be used in Canada until then public funds would be used to continue to provide storage subsidies.

'NEW DEAL'—DIEFENBAKER

TROIS RIVIERES, Que. (CP)—Canadians can be assured of a new deal when the Progressive Conservative party takes over from the Liberals, John Diefenbaker declared in his last Quebec campaign address Tuesday night.

His party will reduce taxes, maintain present social security payments and "make sure the provinces and the municipalities get a fair share of the available tax dollar," the Conservative leader said.

Speaking in both French and English, Mr. Diefenbaker appeared before about 3,000 persons in support of Leon Balcer, National president of the Progressive Conservative Association and seeking re-election in Trois Rivières. The speech capped a fast one-day sweep through the Eastern Townships and into this pulp and paper town, from which he left Tuesday night for a last burst of Ontario campaigning.

'MASS HYSTERIA'—LOW

OTTAWA — Social Credit leader Solon Low charged Tuesday night that well-financed "party propaganda factories" have been winning elections by turning out emotional ballyhoo and whipping up "mass hysteria and blind enthusiasm among the voters."

"Tightly organized, well-financed party machines, have made themselves almost completely independent of the voters and their wishes," Low said in a national CBC telecast. "These party machines retain huge propaganda factories that turn out vast quantities of ballyhoo, the object of which is to stir the feelings of the people and whip up mass hysteria and blind enthusiasm."

"I suggest you haven't very much to say or do in the circumstances because, unless you are well organized into electoral groups at the grass roots level, the party machine will carry on completely oblivious of the wishes of the voters after election day."

Low said that if a Social Credit government took over in Ottawa it would reduce taxation by raising personal exemptions by 50 per cent to "help our people to meet the high cost of living."

"We would also formulate integrated financial, monetary and taxation policies designed to lower the cost of production and with a view to bringing about early substantial reductions in the cost of living," Low added.

'WIN 30 TO 40'—BENNETT

WINNIPEG — British Columbia Premier W. A. C. Bennett flatly predicted here today that the Social Credit party would emerge from the June 10 federal election with 30 to 40 seats to hold the balance of power in the House of Commons.

This number would be at least double the 15 seats the party held in the last Parliament, but it is a far cry from the sweep Scored leaders were trumpeting at the beginning of the campaign. At that time they predicted the party would become the number two group in the Commons, supplanting the Conservatives.

He told a press conference that the Scoreds would win some seats in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia and "maybe a few in Ontario."

RUSS HAVE 5 SUPER BOMBS

WASHINGTON (UP)—A nuclear physicist said today there is evidence that the Russians have produced five super H-bombs similar to the one set off by the United States on March 1, 1954.

Dr. Ralph Lapp, a scientist who worked on the original U.S. atomic bomb, said he got his information on a trip to Japan from which he just returned.

Architect's drawing of proposed ship for Victoria-Port Angeles service

Year-Round Ferry Service To Pt. Angeles

Plans covering a combination passenger and roll-off freight vessel to operate between Victoria and Port Angeles are now in the hands of the U.S. Maritime Commission, R. J. Acheson, president of Black Ball Transport Inc., Seattle, said today.

He said immediate approval of the plans would allow construction in time to commence service in the summer of 1958. The company president said financing of the project has been arranged with the help of C. S. Cumins, of Clise & Cumins, Inc., Seattle brokers.

In addition to approval of the Maritime Commission, terminal arrangements at Victoria and Port Angeles will have to be made before service can start, Mr. Acheson said.

The 325-foot ferry would be designed to carry 1,000 passengers and 125 automobiles, and would remain on the Victoria-Port Angeles run on a year-round basis.

Mr. Acheson said the new vessel will make a minimum of one round trip a day between Port Angeles and Victoria during winter months, with four or more trips daily during the tourist season.

In addition to the cross-strait passenger and automobile service, the ship will handle freight between Seattle, Port Townsend, Port Angeles and Victoria. Black Ball's present freight vessel, the Troquois, would also continue in service between those ports.

Philip F. Spaulding and Associates furnished the architectural plans for the new vessel which is scheduled to be constructed at Puget Sound Bridge and Dredging Co.

PRAYER FOR TODAY

O thou who art love itself, do Thou make pure our affection in the home, but keep us from loving father or mother, son or daughter, more than we love Thee. Preserve us from every form of idolatry and help us to worship Thee only; through Christ. Amen.

This Secretary Hard to Date But She Sits on Boss' Knee

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

Only one thing is needed to live up to the solemn clasp of telephone executives at Ye Olde Empress—and that is an Electronic Secretary of the kind advertised by the B.C. Telephone Company.

Alas, a comprehensive search of all conference rooms failed to disclose a single electronic secretary and I am still wondering what it would be like to have one on one's knee while dictating letters.

However, I did hear of a leading Victoria drug store which has an ES and, clutching a faint straw of hope I telephoned the young lady with the idea of asking her out for a drink and a chat.

A sweet, refined voice answered. "Good morning," it said. "This is the electronic secre-

Total A-Bomb Test Ban Favored by Eisenhower

Bulganin Says Reds Ready to Talk Any Disarmament Phase

(From AP and UP Dispatches)

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower said today he would favor "a total and complete ban" on testing of atomic weapons if there could be total disarmament in the nuclear field.

The president also said that he doubted whether the United States ever again will explode one of the great hydrogen bombs for testing purposes.

At the same time, he said the U.S. will join in an international agreement to end atomic tests only if that is part of a safeguarded disarmament program to prevent the use of nuclear weapons in any future war.

In response to another question at his press conference, Eisenhower said he welcomes every indication, including the words of Soviet Communist Leader Nikita Khrushchev, pointing to the possibility of achieving a first-step disarmament agreement. He said he never rejects any such hopeful sign until it has been explored to the full.

At almost the same time, Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin told an international conference at Geneva that Russia is prepared to conclude a "general agreement on the whole problem of disarmament," as well as on any of its specific phases. In an unprecedented personal message read on the opening day of the annual conference of the International Labor Organization, Bulganin repeated previous Russian demands for "peaceful collaboration and friendly relations" among all nations.

Eisenhower did not explain precisely what he meant in saying there probably would be no more tests of the great hydrogen bombs. He did not make clear where he would draw the line in bomb sizes.

London Conference in 6-Day Rest

Atomic Energy Commissioner Willard F. Libby told Congress today that nuclear bomb testing is "a small risk" that must be measured against "the risk of annihilation . . . if we surrendered the weapons." (See Page 2.)

At London the five-power disarmament conference broke up for a six-day recess without deciding on India's demand to enter the talks.

The request from India threatened a sudden East-West split, with Russia supporting it and Britain, France, Canada and the United States opposing it.

Diplomats believe U.S. delegate Harold E. Stassen would be ready to begin presenting the new "American First" step partial disarmament plan next Tuesday.

New Backing Claimed By Civil Servants

Officials of the B.C. Government Employees' Association denied today that their membership is "backing out" of a strike vote scheduled to take place within the next few weeks.

A. C. Bennett, assistant general secretary, told the Times from Vancouver that the situation was the reverse. The association has taken on 200 new members since the strike vote was decided upon May 24, he said.

The only defections have been five professional engineers in the provincial law rights branch, who felt the action was contrary to their ethics. (Mr. Bennett said he was conferring with the Professional Engineers' Society of B.C. to determine the position of the hundreds of other professional engineers in the government service.)

"The general reaction (to the strike vote) throughout the service has been favorable," Mr. Bennett said.

"The whole thing has gone past the primary consideration of wages and become a matter of principle," he said. The government employees are most concerned about their treatment by the government and lack of bargaining rights.

Mr. Bennett estimates that the strike ballots will go in the mail to the association's close to 11,000 members by the end of next week. Another two weeks will be needed after that to have them returned and counted.

In the meantime, the association has written to Premier Bennett asking for a meeting with the cabinet, and this may come about next week after the federal election is over.

Sweep Winners in B.C. Over $300,000 Richer

Irish immigrant, Mrs. Kathleen Bones of 1762 Carrick Road, Victoria, won $2,100 to day in the Irish sweepstake on England's Epsom Derby.

Top prize of $140,000 went to R. A. Cleator of Vancouver who held a ticket on the winning horse Crepello.

With consolation prizes not yet calculated it is estimated that British Columbians won a total of at least $300,000 in the Irish Sweep.

Mrs. Bones was one of three Victorians to win prizes. The others are 19-year-olds—Leslie

Lowres of West Saanich Road, Keating, and Flo Peacock of 3965 Rainbow, Victoria—who shared the same ticket.

All three rose early and listened with bated breath to a radio commentary on the race, broadcast at 3 p.m. English time.

For a few seconds after the classic started, Mrs. Bones' horse Mystic Prince was among the leaders—and if it had finished first she would have won a top prize of $140,000.

The excitement was almost too much for me," daintily blue-

eyed Mrs. Bones said: "All those big figures were dancing around in my head . . . and then as the race went on, and I listened to all that gabble of names, I realized that Mystic Prince had dropped way behind. "If I had won the top prize I might have taken a trip home," she said. "As it is, I think we shall use the $2,100 for household necessities, including a washing machine."

Hours of suspense followed the early morning race commentary for Leslie Lowres and Flo Peacock, two "close friends" who shared ticket NHV 26218 under the nom-de-plume "Lucky Us."

Their horse, Master Effort, was not mentioned in the race commentary and did not appear in the later results which were flashed over the wires from Epsom.

If their horse was a non-starter, they will receive a consolation prize of between $56 and $500.

Besides top winner Cleator, Mrs. Annie Hammond, 70-year-old widow, won $56,000 with her ticket on Ballymoss. Also holding a ticket on Ballymoss was Gunter Gahrns, one-time German paratrooper. His ticket was shared by another German immigrant, Werner Philipp.

Two Ontario residents who held Irish sweepstakes tickets worth $140,000 on Crepello were Don Pearson, 21-year-old fibre mill employee from Pickering, Ont., and S. G. Farrow of Toronto.

Lumber Operators Accept 'Truce'

The 157 lumber industry operators on the British Columbia coast announced today they have accepted recommendation of conciliation board chairman Gordon Wismer, Q.C., that the current contract be extended to September 30 with the 32,000-member International Woodworkers of America.

Announcement was made through Forest and Industrial Relations spokesman, John Billings.

The present contract expires June 14. The union has recommended rejection of the conciliation board report and the four-month "truce."

Woodworkers have voted to take a strike vote on the question of a 20 per cent wage increase and other benefits.

GIVE RELIEF

"Continuing a contract made in much better times and which was considered fair then, would give this hard-pressed industry some relief from uncertainty, with consequent benefit to everyone concerned," said Billings.

"However, the board has seen fit to recommend a wait and see period, and the operators vote as provided under the Labor Relations Act."

circumstances, have decided to accept this recommendation. "While the board recommendations are not all that the operators would like, they are recognized as a sincere effort to prevent bad conditions from becoming worse."

"In the interests of industrial peace as against industrial chaos, in the province's peak payroll industry, the need is clear to support any measure that will keep this province from committing a degree of economic suicide."

"Competitors who already have advantages in a normal market and are giving B.C. coast mills a hard time of it would get a firmer grip on this business if we either raised our costs of operating sharply, or cut off shipments due to a work stoppage."

"The orders they take from us mean less dollars in B.C. pay envelopes," he said.

F.I.R., in making its decision known to the minister of labor today, requested that if a strike vote is taken, that it should be a secret government-supervised vote as provided under the Labor Relations Act.

FAVORITE WINS ENGLISH DERBY

Crepello, the favorite, with Lester Piggott aboard, today captured the derby at Epsom Downs, by finishing a length and a half in front of U.S.-

sired long-shot Ballymoss. There were 22 starters. (See stories.)—(AP wire-photo)

Through the Hair Clinic Phase

By ELMER WHEELER

The hair tonic bottle and the worried much, but I'd been in comb had become Elmer's the building and thought since phobia. My barber was giving I had a few minutes, I'd see me another one; he had a full what he had to say. Then I head of hair. So I gave him tried to pretend a lack of interest.

Then I decided maybe a visit to one of those advertised hair clinics would solve my problem. I picked out a leading one in town and sneaked into its second-floor office.

Those "before" and "after" ads really got me.

I told the man I wasn't care, almost kindness. He surely showed his appreciation of the hair I had left.

HE PUT the cotton under a microscope. He did many things that looked real scientific to me, sometimes nodding in approval, then again scowling as though he had discovered something with legs on it.

I tried to be bored about the whole thing, little knowing that a year from that day I'd be in treated my hair with great

Pensioners Told To Reject Liberals

VANCOUVER (CP)—The executive of the Elder Citizens' Association of B.C., which claims to represent a majority of old age pensioners in the province, called on all recipients of the allowance Tuesday night to vote against the Liberals next Monday.

A resolution passed by the executive at a meeting in Vancouver said "elder citizens in the province and the rest of the country most bitterly resent the proposed $6 monthly pension increase."

The resolution added: "The sum is totally inadequate compared with the present cost of living even for the bare necessities of existence."

It claimed that Immigration Minister Pickersgill had said Hungarian refugees needed a minimum of $3 a day, and held that this proved the Liberal government was aware of what was considered a minimum allowance, while continuing to pay old-age pensioners $40 monthly.

Attorney-General Bonner said Tuesday night Canada should not international aid to less prosperous countries on a "firm, business-like basis for the national and international good and sound diplomatic relations."

Mr. Bonner spoke at a Social Credit campaign meeting at Fort Alberni, sharing the platform with Comox-Alberni candidate Ben Wright.

He criticized the Liberal trade and diplomatic policies and stated that during a recent tour of Manitoba he found that the government's policies were being translated into support for Social Credit.

He admitted that Social Credit candidates in eastern Canada are going to have "heavy time of it," though he said there is increasing interest in the movement.

Defence Minister Campney said Tuesday night the federal government "does far better" for British Columbia than the Social Credit government.

Mr. Campney, addressing an election rally in Vancouver was critical of Social Credit posters which urge a "better deal" from Ottawa.

He said the federal government paid out in B.C. last year $80,000,000 more than Ottawa collected in the province. "Other parties talk and complain, but the Liberal party has done things for this city and this province as well as for all Canada."

He cited subsidies to the province-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway, $2,500,000 to be spent for paying the Alaska Highway and $6,000,000 in aid for the Cassiar-Stewart Highway.

Hundreds of construction workers in the Port Alberni district will be unable to vote because they arrived after the federal election writ was issued April 13.

Upwards of 500 men employed on a pulp and paper mill construction project and at the Ash River hydro development will be ineligible to cast ballots June 10.

P. Leo Anderson, returning officer for Comox-Alberni, said there is no way the men can get the vote, unless they were registered in their home ridings and return there to vote. Most of the men reside in the Vancouver area.

Harold Hine, Social Credit candidate in Nanaimo riding, is doing his campaigning with his right ankle in a cast. He broke it when he fell while nailing a Social Credit campaign poster on a telephone pole during the weekend.

A telegram to Prime Minister St. Laurent urging the government to take immediate action on a low cost housing program in an effort to avert a strike of 30,000 coast woodworkers was sent Tuesday night by six Social Credit candidates on the lower mainland and Vancouver Island.

The telegram charged the a real panic and would be openly inviting advice, help, support.

Finally he stopped all the testing. Took off his lenses, wiped them professionally, and after a tantalizing time, coughed and said:

"Young man within a year you'll be as bald as I am!"

Yipes—I hadn't noticed the guy was bald.

"That is," he went on, "unless you are smarter than I was and catch the trouble before it catches up with you."

I SIGNED UP for 12 treatments.

Week after week I'd sneak into his office, feeling like a bookkeeper who was afraid they'd soon catch up to his embezzling.

I now became a clinic addict. I kept it up for six months and everything was going fine, including my hair. At times hope came to me when he told me mine might be one of the cases that was curable by treatments, "expensive ones."

I became self-satisfied with myself. I was whipping baldness as I had whipped fat.

I'd perhaps consent now to let the vet give my dog the haircut.

Up until now I just couldn't see myself standing by and watching the dog's long hair fall to the floor of the vet's place.

LIFE WAS really being good to me. I was smarter than most bald boys.

Then one night, in a bragging mood, I told the wife how I was doing something that would go down in history. I had solved the baldness problem.

"Seen the back of your head lately?" she asked.

I hadn't. She advised me I had better take a good look. I did. Wow! I had a hole in the back-end-of-my-hair.

A hole in my hair. I was so mad, I kicked the dog. He'd never get to that vet now.

U.S. NUCLEAR BLAST FIRED FROM BALLOON

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (AP)—The United States today exploded a baby nuclear device for the first time from a balloon 500 feet above Yucca Flat.

The explosion, touched off at 5.45 a.m., was barely discernible at Las Vegas, about 70 miles away.

The Atomic Energy Commission said officials at the control point 15 miles from the balloon saw a brief flash and several seconds later the usual mushroom appeared. It rose slowly to above 6,000 feet.

ELECTION RACE

Bennett prophesied "great gains for the Conservatives in Ontario and a few in the Maritimes. He said the Liberals would lose seats in every section of Canada."

No party will have a majority in the next Parliament, but the Social Credit representation will have increased more than any other party, said Bennett.

This would put the Social Credit in the position of holding the balance of power.

Bennett said that in the instance that no party gets a majority in the Commons, as he predicts, the Social Credit party would join in "coalition or col-lusion" with neither the Liberals nor the Conservatives.

He said that if the Social Credit gain the balance of power they would support the party in power which did away with the present "tight money" policy of the Liberal government.

"The question of national unity is the reason that I feel that Social Credit should have the balance of power in Ottawa at this time."

'NEED LESSON'—DOUGLAS

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP)—Premier T. C. Douglas said Tuesday the Liberal government has grown fat, complacent, indifferent and arrogant because of its long term in office and needs to be taught a lesson.

He told a political rally in support of Max Campbell, CCF candidate for The Battlefords, that in the last 25 years every economic reform and piece of progressive legislation had resulted from the CCF which had mobilized public opinion to force it upon the government.

Mr. Douglas quoted Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures to show that in the last 10 years the national income had risen to 235 from a standard 100. At the same time, he said, the net farm income had only gone to 139 from 100 and the wages of the individual worker to 198 from 100.

Victim Identified

VANCOUVER — A young man who was drowned while skin diving Tuesday at Whittle Park in West Vancouver, was identified by police today as Donald Albert Cooper, 22, of Roberts Creek, B.C.

New Flooding 'Risk' or 'Annihilation' Threatens Three Nuclear Expert Asserts Midwest States

WASHINGTON (AP)—Atomic energy commissioner Willard F. Libby told Congress today that nuclear bomb testing is a "small risk" that must be measured against "the risk of annihilation... if we surrendered the weapons."

Libby's testimony was prepared for a Senate-House of Representatives atomic energy sub-committee which seeks to determine the effects of radiation and fallout.

Other scientists have testified that excessive man-made radiation can cause persons now on earth to develop cancer and do even more damage to generations yet unborn.

"It is not contended that there is no risk," said Libby, an atomic physicist of international reputation, but he contended that there are various risks in many human activities.

He mentioned the 40,000 highway deaths annually in the United States, the risk of drowning at beaches frequented for pleasure and "accidents in the home."

"Here our choice seems much clearer. Are we willing to take this very small and rigidly controlled risk, or would we prefer to run the risk of annihilation which might result if we rendered the weapons which are

What Joey Says Goes

Times' United Nations correspondent Charles Lynch is taking a summer holiday from Lake Huron to take a look at the general election. Here, he analyses the situation in Newfoundland.

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — In this province, they say, what Joey says goes, on politics and maybe a lot of other things, as well. And, they add, Joey, otherwise Premier Joseph R. Smallwood, says to vote Liberal, so that's that.

Some Liberal Party strategists even felt that so certain was Newfoundland to return several Liberals on June 10 there was no need for Prime Minister St. Laurent to come here at all—that his time could better be spent in places where Liberal candidates needed his helping hand.

But other, and perhaps wiser, views prevailed and Mr. St. Laurent came this week to Newfoundland, devoting a precious two days on the eve of the final week of a strenuous campaign to a province that by most accounts was a sure thing for the Liberals.

No doubt he is glad he did come, for while he must have been disappointed by the size of the crowd he drew here, it indicated as well as such things can the fact that, at least in the two ridings that centre around the city of St. John's, the party is going to have to fight to retain its seats.

The magic of Premier Smallwood is still there—or at least the dynamism and personal appeal of the man is still there—but the fact is that his own best efforts could not turn out a crowd of over 900 people in a stadium that can hold almost 5,000. Nobody expected 5,000 but when Mr. St. Laurent appeared here in 1953 he drew several thousands to an open air meeting. True, that election was held in the warmth of the summer, and equally true, Premier Smallwood took a more forceful part in that campaign, his activities this time having been curtailed somewhat by his recent family tragedy.

HURRIED BUILD-UP

It was also true that four years ago Newfoundlanders were nearer to confederation than they are today, and were anxious to get a look at the man who was the Canadian Prime Minister, and who led the negotiations on the Canadian side that brought Newfoundland into confederation.

This time, the build-up that preceded the prime minister's visit started only 24 hours before he arrived. The night before he came, the streets suddenly blossomed with flags—strings of them along the streets. Loud speakers blared the news of his coming, and

Premier Smallwood exhorted the people to turn out. He quickly took charge of everything, from the placing of the ropes at the airport to the crowd's personal explanation of the exact route of the motorcade.

The crowd at the rally, while disappointing by the usual Smallwood standard, was much larger than that attracted by the Progressive-Conservative leader, Mr. John Diefenbaker, when he came here at the very start of the election campaign. But Mr. Diefenbaker is not a well-known figure here, and the Progressive-Conservatives are running more on the personalities of their local candidates than on the Diefenbaker reputation.

They have a strong candidate in St. John's West in the person of S. J. Browne, who represented the riding at Ottawa from 1949 to 1953 and gave up his seat in the provincial legislature to run again this time, and in St. John's East with James McGrath. The main strength of the Progressive-Conservatives is in this city, and while it would be a minor miracle if the Tories capture any other Newfoundland seat, an upset could be in the cards for one or other of the St. John's seats, or both.

'SAILOR' PICKERSGILL

There were no surprises in Mr. St. Laurent's speech—ye-elect us if you think we have done a good job, throw us out if you don't. There were local asides, some fun at the expense of the candidate for Bonaville-Twillingate, "Sailor" Jack Pickersgill.

There was more than the usual emphasis on family benefits, for Newfoundland has been filling up with children since confederation and you can scarcely drive the streets or the country roads without scattering crowds of pre-school tykes. The prime minister mentioned this, and found it good.

And he reported that, having taken soundings from sea to sea, he was more confident than ever that the Liberals would be returned to power. "You hear that?" said Joey Smallwood to the people. "Now, don't waste your votes by sending men to Ottawa who will sit in the wilderness of opposition." The terms of union under which Newfoundland joined Canada are up for revision, he reminded—send Liberals to Ottawa and you can be sure the federal benefits will be revised upward.

Mr. St. Laurent beamed, and went on his way to the echo of three cheers led by the premier who, in the words of the song, rants and roars like a true Newfoundland even if the people, at least here in St. John's, don't rant and roar in reply as much as he might like.

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN

All in the Family

LONDON—Strictly personal... I see that at Sotheby's, the famous London auction rooms, a painting by my great-great-grandfather (I may be short one "great" there because he died in 1823) has sold for $4,800. This is a fair price, but not sensational for Raeburn, Scotland's and one of the world's top portrait painters.

My "McNab" was bought by Dewart, the whisky people, for $150,000 and this big portrait stands—floodlit at night—in the window of their London offices. Everyone knows Raeburn, if only for his painting of Boy With a Rabbit, which has been gracing candy boxes and calendars for many generations.

Interruption while you ask how come if his name's spelled Raeburn and mine's Reyburn he is my great-great-grandfather? I'm glad you asked that. It's a short story. I'll make it as long as possible.

It seems that back in the 18th century there were four brothers up in Scotland who owned a factory that made Glengarry bonnets. They had a family row and two of the brothers broke away and set up their own Glengarry bonnet factory.

In those days people were not fussy about the precise spelling of names (there are still arguments over the correct spelling of Shakespeare) and the family name got all sorts of variations such as Rayburn, Raburn, Raeburn, Reyburn. However, with two firms of brothers in the Glengarry business things got very confused and there was many a fight as to which firm orders were addressed to.

So they got together and decided that one pair of brothers would call themselves Raeburn and the other pair would spell it Reyburn. The portrait painter came down on the Raeburn side and I wound up on the other.

Perhaps because in the old days our clan were not the marrying type, there are not many of us with the Reyburn spelling around. I only encountered one in Canada outside our immediate family. The name was above a shop and thinking that perhaps it was some long-lost cousin I went in to talk to the owner.

He turned out to be a Middle-European immigrant whose real name was something like Reinbergensoff and when changing his name to something less foreign he had seen my by-line in a paper and thought "Reyburn" would do as well as any.

Raeburn the painter was a baronet and the title has come down through the years to the present Sir William Raeburn, Bart, in Scotland. Being the eldest son of an eldest son, I'm likely to have to go to the Scottish courts to claim my title against rivals who will object to the different spelling.

But I don't think that will be in the near future. There are so many ahead of me in line that it will require nothing short of a ghastly epidemic among the Raeburns before I become Sir Wallace Reyburn, Bart.

SHORTER LIFE (COUGH) BEATS LIFE (WHEEZE) WITHOUT CIGARETS

By DINAH KERR

Seven Victorians lit up cigarettes, cigars and pipes today and through a fine haze of smoke laughed at death.

Their tobacco-stained hands didn't even twitch as they received the news that heavy smoking would cut their life expectancy by seven or eight years.

Furthermore, according to an American Cancer Society study, regular cigarette smokers die from lung cancer 10 times more frequently than non-smokers and run a greater risk of fatal coronary heart disease. (See story, page 31.)

The eighth Victorian, non-smoker Bill Archer of 1404 Esquimalt Road, adopted an "I told you so" attitude.

"I used to smoke two or three packages a day," he said. "This is a true story, so help me God, I smoked one right after another. One night I couldn't sleep. I was all nerves. My wife said to me, 'Why don't you give up cigarettes, my dear.' So I did. That was five years ago and let me tell you for a while I nearly snatched cigarettes from people's mouths."

But I'm 82 now and I don't miss them a bit."

The seven smokers inhaled the information in one deep drag and breathed out nothing but courage.

Only C. H. Rutman of 1167 St. David Street admitted certain misgivings. He smokes a package of cigarettes a day. "Hey, I guess I'd better slow down," he said. He considered his cigarette briefly. "I'll cut down by one-quarter," he said. "I'd like to figure on an extra two years anyway."

Cigar-smoker Rudolph van den Brink of 1422 Newport took the news with a careless smile.

"Would you give up driving a car because it could shorten your life?" he asked. "I used to smoke 10 to 12 cigars a day and my health was excellent. I just cut down a bit because I can't always get the right brand."

Alex Hutcheson, Cordova Bay Road, began smoking a pipe when he was 15 and he's still breathing in fumes at 74.

"When the Lord is ready for me to die, I'll die," he said shortly. "That's all there is to it. Everybody dies and it doesn't matter what you die of."

Cleaver Wilson of 5319 Parker wouldn't say how many cigarettes he smokes a day, but whatever it is, he won't cut it by one puff.

"If you go through life worrying about all the things that could kill you, you won't enjoy it very much," he said. "I have lots more things that scare me day by day than the thought that I might die eight years before the non-smokers."

Women smokers go along with the theory, "smoke while you can—tomorrow you may die."

"The idea of death doesn't bother me at all," said Miss Vida Morley, 224 Crease. "I'm so curious about the hereafter that I can't wait to get there."

She goes through about 15 cigarettes a day and smokes filter-tips because "I don't like bits of tobacco in my mouth."

Miss Helen Moran, of 1114 Rockland, doesn't worry about the death-dealing effects of smoking either.

"I might give up cigarettes today and slip on a banana peel and die tomorrow," she said. "Smoking probably has a bad effect on my health but I haven't noticed it. The doctors may have a point, but so what?"

Mrs. Wilma Jenkins of 947 Inskip summed it up like a true smoker.

"I've been hearing about this subject for quite a while," she said. "And I've given it a lot of thought. 'But I don't give up smoking. We have to die sometime of something, don't we?'"

MONTE ROBERTS

Mr. Chairman, honored guests, ladies and gentlemen. It is indeed a privilege to appear before this distinguished gathering, and to be given the opportunity to say a few words about the organization which I have the honor to represent.

The organization which I have the honor to represent, ladies and gentlemen, is the Society for the Prevention Of.

It is quite possible you have not heard of the Society for the Prevention Of, as this is a comparatively new organization.

In fact, it is so new it hasn't been formed as yet. But the Society for the Prevention Of fills a much needed need in the city of Victoria.

In fact, the Society for the Prevention Of will, in time, become a great force for good in the province of British Columbia, the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Nations, and even Oak Bay.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I wish to make it clear that there is no more democratic organization in the world than the Society for the Prevention Of.

Members of the society have complete freedom of choice with regard to what they wish to be in favor of the prevention of.

Within the framework of this great organization, a member can stand firmly for the prevention of changing the Fountain Circle, while another member is encouraged to work for the prevention of retaining the Fountain Circle.

In this truly democratic group you will find members cheering on the prevention of landfill garbage disposal and other members enthusiastically attempting to prevent dumping of garbage at sea.

Naturally, ladies and gentlemen, we expect there will be times when all members of the Society for the Prevention Of will stand together as one unit.

The Society's standing committee on looking out for anything that might get things done is ever watchful, ladies and gentlemen.

And as soon as there is any danger of anything that might get things done, the Society will, of course, work to gether to prevent it.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I urge your support for this great, progressive organization—one which, I am sure, will flourish in this area—the Society for the Prevention Of.

CENTENNIAL FUSS

Youth Statue 'Unsuitable' Women Claim

The fuss over the B.C. Centennial Committee's "Symbol of Youth" statue project has been stirred up again by members of the Lake Hill Women's Institute.

At a meeting this week the women expressed strong disapproval of the proposal to erect one of three modernistic statues on the Legislative Building lawn next year.

"We feel it is unsuitable, and definitely not in keeping with the architecture of the buildings," said secretary Mrs. Alice M. Buchanan.

Final decision on the project is still up in the air and will stay there until the federal election is over and the wandering provincial cabinet gets back together again.

The cabinet will be asked to approve a Centennial Committee recommendation, following selection of three finalists from 40 entries submitted in the province-wide contest.

Each of the three sculptors, including Herbert Sieber of Victoria whose model is pictured above, received a $250 prize.

The committee is presumed to have recommended that one of the three be commissioned for $20,000 to execute a large-scale statue to put up in front of the buildings.

However, it left the door open to dropping the project altogether. Money for the job would be raised by 10-cent contributions from B.C. school children.

Fall Fatal To City Man At Alberni

Wilfred Smith, 40, 2124 Quimper, Victoria, died in Port Alberni early today of injuries suffered in a fall at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

According to reports Mr. Smith, a foreman iron worker was employed in construction of a new wood mill at the extension to the MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. pulp mill in Port Alberni when he fell a distance of 40 feet.

Midway through his fall the back of his head struck a metal pipe. He was taken to West Coast General Hospital, where he died at 4:10 a.m. today. It was understood he never regained consciousness.

His wife spent the night at his bedside. An inquest will be called by Dr. N. H. Jones, coroner, but no date has been set.

RCMP BRAVERY MARKED

Commendations to four members of RCMP in B.C. were announced today by Assistant Commissioner C. W. Harvison for acts of bravery in November, 1955.

Personal commendations of Commissioner L. H. Nicholson go out to Const. Laurence Martin and Const. A. T. Millhouse, both of Haney detachment, for their part in the rescue of three persons from the flooded Allouette River, near Haney, Nov. 3, 1955.

Cpl. K. M. McHale, Invermere detachment and Const. H. D. Bowyer, then of Invermere, were commended for their part in the rescue of A. E. Portman, an employee of Columbia Gypsum Co., Windermere, who was buried in a hopper full of gypsum rock, Nov. 29, 1955.

STRANDED

Mrs. Hedy Worlanke, her small daughter and Kenneth Bruce were stranded in the flooded Allouette River and constables Millhouse and Martin struggled through the debris-filled river to help them.

Mr. Bruce was in the fork of a swaying tree inches from being swept into the stream, and Mrs. Worlanke with her daughter clutched a log in the river. Const. Martin swam to the mother and child and prevented them from being carried away while Const. Millhouse went for aid.

He worked his way back up the river and to a 300-yard lifeline previously stretched across the torrent.

It was mostly submerged when he got to it and to cross it he had to remain under water most of the time.

He was able to summon further aid and the rescue of the three civilians and Const. Martin was completed with the aid of army personnel and searchlights after dark.

FROZEN TOMB

Cpl. McHale and Const. Bowyer were part of a team of 40 men and two doctors who dug the gypsum worker from what could have been a frozen tomb after he fell through a crust of rock and frost into a 12-foot hopper, several feet of rock closing in over him.

The two policemen and civilian John Kroepff went into the hopper and began digging. Kroepff noticed a wall of frozen rock beginning to cave in on the rescuers and spread-eagled himself on the mass.

Const. Bowyer, in shirt sleeves, threw himself against Kroepff to hold back the slide for 1½ hours until Portman was rescued. The constable later contracted pneumonia.

Only Victoria Felt Raindrops

In all the Pacific Northwest, only Victoria was able to boast a shower at noon, substitute weatherman Frank Williams said today at Gonzales Observatory.

"There was no rain to the north, and none to the east," he said. There is the likelihood of more rain tonight, he said, but Thursday will be "mainly sunny."

Temperatures will range between 52 degrees tonight and 68 degrees Thursday.

CITY MOVES ON NEED FOR LIFEGUARDS

Victoria will engage a lifeguard for Thetis Lake "as soon as possible" city engineer J. C. Garnett said today.

The move indicated a change in policy from last year when the lifeguard went on duty in mid-July.

Decision followed a public works meeting, at City Hall which discussed the growing need for protection as outlined in Tuesday's Times.

Victoria-Saanich Beaches and Parks Committee, meeting tonight, was slated to discuss the matter also. Chairman, Coun. S. W. Brock of Saanich, said he would propose immediate lifeguard protection for three beaches at Beaver and Elk Lakes.

Works committee today received a request from parks committee for $2,000 additional funds for expenditure at Thetis Lake.

Ald. J. Donald Smith moved it be transferred with the recommendation a lifeguard be hired immediately due to the increased number of people drawn to local beaches by current warm weather.

The motion concerning a lifeguard was declared unnecessary as the matter is within jurisdiction of the city engineer, who doubles as water commissioner in charge of Thetis.

FALSE SECURITY

Mr. Garnett pointed out he believed lifeguards should be provided by concessionaires in city-owned parks. He added, he did not think one guard could adequately cover a crowded beach. He thought it might create a false sense of security.

ARE YOU CONFUSED?

Here's How June 10—Voting Is Simple

Confused about what riding you vote in next Monday? It's really quite simple.

If you live in the municipalities of Esquimalt, Victoria, or Oak Bay, then you are in the Victoria federal riding.

The second local constituency, Esquimalt-Saanich, takes in all of the Saanich Peninsula, Colwood, Langford, and the whole Lower Island bounded by Port Renfrew on the west and just above Cobble Hill on the north.

There is one exception: the so-called Saanich "panhandle," which is included in Victoria riding. This is the portion of Saanich lying south of North Dairy Road.

How do you know if you can vote? First and foremost, you must be on the voters' list. Except for the rural section of Esquimalt-Saanich riding where unregistered voters can be voted for at the polling station, if you're not on the list you're out of luck.

Generally, the rule on eligibility of a voter is that he or she must be a Canadian citizen or other British subject—that includes immigrants from Eire—21 years old by polling day and resident in Canada for the year immediately preceding the election date.

You are also required to vote in the riding of your "ordinary residence."

That is, if your home is in Nanaimo and you are visiting here on a business or pleasure trip you must return to Nanaimo to vote. There is no absentee poll.

If you are in doubt as to the polling station where you vote, it is posted in the top right-hand corner of the voters' list mailed out by the returning officer.

A number of candidates have also mailed out cards to registered voters telling them which polling station they should go to.

Smith Torpedoes Traffic Plan

One-Way Streets Stand Reversed

A last-minute switch by Ald. J. Donald Smith today shattered hopes that a one-way traffic plan would be tried on a trial basis to improve the Fountain Circle.

The alderman, who previously pressed consistently for adoption of the Faustman one-way plan, today recommended all plans be shelved for 10 years and the infamous traffic circle left as it is.

"Write letters to Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer," he told council public works committee, "tell them we are sorry we spent your money and we are right back where we started."

Ald. Hugh Ramsay recommended public works committee ask council to try the one-way proposal on a temporary basis.

There had been hope council would approve. Ald. Ramsay, Ald. E. D. McEwen, Ald. M. H. Mooney and Ald. Smith had indicated they were in favor. One more yes vote would have given them a majority and a positive attempt to end the conflict of ideas would have been under way.

Mayor Percy Scourrah had indicated he might cast a yes vote. He said he had come to realize the one-way plan might be the only solution. It was almost certain he would support a trial.

Other council members are opposed to a one-way street system, except for Ald. Mrs. Lily Wilson who is apparently undecided.

Loss of Alderman Smith's support, however, was thought to be the kiss of death to the Faustman one-way plan.

The vote came after public works committee heard a report from a traffic sub-committee which condemned an alternative plan recently submitted by a group of Douglas Street merchants.

The traffic committee said under the merchants' plan, also drawn by California traffic expert J. D. Faustman, signal phases were too short to allow traffic through the circle, and pedestrians would have to travel at six miles per hour to get across during the span of green and amber lights.

Traffic would tend to funnel south on Government Street and the whole plan would be less effective in non-rush hours than the present roundabout.

Oak Bay Breakwater Supported by 2,500

The Victoria Outboard Club, pumping for a breakwater project to protect Oak Bay boat-house moorings, has collected approximately 2,500 names on a petition in support of the project.

The club, at its annual meeting Tuesday night, decided to turn the names over to Oak Bay council for presentation to the federal government.

The club also approved a motion that each federal election candidate here be sent a letter requesting his support for the breakwater.

Frank Bayliss was elected commodore and H. Adams, commodore last year, was elected vice-commodore by acclamation. Secretary Wm. Hughes and treasurer Reg Williams both were re-elected.

The club, which met at 848 Yates Street, also spent considerable time discussing the possibility of building a private launching site at Shawnigan Lake. A committee will check on lease rights and access to the lake, and further action is expected at a meeting in the near future.

The club also discussed speeding in the yacht basin at Oak Bay and racing at Langford Lake. It was felt that while club members generally observe speed regulations, the greatest offenders are certain "irresponsible persons" who do not belong to any club.

The club feels a speed limit of four miles per hour be set and that signs be posted at various points in the yacht basin to remind all boaters. The club approved a motion that Oak Bay's chief of police be sent a letter stating the club's stand in the matter.

The outboard members also said they would be willing to erect no speeding signs "at our own expense."

Next club event will be a cruise to Sidney Spit on June 9. Approximately 30 members attended Tuesday's meeting.

SAILORS SCRAMBLE IN RECALL

RCN Pacific Command, Tuesday called a unique emergency recall exercise to test readiness of ships in maintenance to get ready for sea.

Four ships—all recently returned from exercises—were involved.

Orders went out at 1:30 p.m. for HMC ships Skeena, Cayuga, Athabaskan and Stettler to put to sea.

There was no previous warning for officers or men. At 4:30 p.m., three hours after the order, Athabaskan had a steaming crew aboard and cleared Duntze Head.

The Skeena left harbor at 2:30 a.m. today. The Cayuga, which was in drydock preparing for re-fit, got away at 10:15 a.m., and the Stettler at 11:45 a.m.

All four ships are members of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron.

Funeral Thursday For Newspaperman

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Will you please tell me the location of the stone which commemorates the landing here of Douglas, afterwards so important a figure in B.C.R.A.L.

A. The stone is at Clover Point. The inscription on its plaque reads: "This 10-acre park extends west to Beacon Hill Park. Sir James Douglas, first governor of British Columbia, landed here in 1842 to select a site for the Hudson's Bay Company fort in Victoria, 1843. It was used for a rifle range from 1899 to 1931 and leased in 1947 for 99 years from the Crown by the City of Victoria."

The plaque was erected by the city in 1955.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to The Times, addressed to "Ask The Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums.

Ungrateful Snaps— Turn Out as Weeds

By PENNY SAVER

Earlier this spring I found a whole plantation of sturdy-looking little plants flourishing in the garden. "Good, volunteer snapdragons!" I thought and transplanted them to the front border where I have been nursing them along with the most tender care. Then suspicion dawned. Flower buds appeared, and they are like no snapdragons I've ever seen. They're not quite in flower yet so I'm not sure what particular kind of weed they are, but I do know that those plants have abused my trust—they are definitely NOT snapdragons.

So I took myself off to a garden shop to see what I could find in the way of replacements, and I was very lucky—they had the most gorgeous pansies I've seen, at eight plants for $1. which I think is very reasonable considering how pansies seed themselves and form a lovely plantation.

There is the widest assortment of colors to choose from, and since each plant has at least one lovely big frilled bloom on it already, you're sure of what you're getting.

They also have nice big snapdragons for 50c a dozen, but I've had enough of snapdragons and pseudo-snapdragons. I was more taken with the assortment of different types of French marigolds at the same price. They are all in bloom and what a bright spot of color they'd make in a border.

There were sturdy-looking zinnias, too, also 50c. I didn't need any myself, as I have grown mine from seed—both of them.

FOR GARDEN MEALS

While I'm talking about gardens, I must mention some very useful trays. They're good-sized oblong ones made of pressed fiberglass, very light and practically unbreakable. Just the thing for serving cold drinks or a picnic meal in the garden.

The one I saw was pastel rose with a design of gold paint dribbled across it, but they also come in pastel green, black and other shades. Price is $7.50.

ROMANTIC LIGHT

In the same store, I noticed terra cotta terrace lamps from Mexico. These are really quite unique—they're about a yard high, in three tiers, and each

Choice Between Home, Career Source of Conflict, Tension

VANCOUVER (CP)—The rival sions between the claims of home and career cause and work cause conflict in women's lives at almost every stage.

A woman's life, Marion Royce told a Young Women's Christian Association meeting Monday night. Miss Royce, who for years was secretary for social and international questions for the world organization of the YWCA, was one of three panelists who discussed bringing up young persons at the YWCA's annual convention at the University of British Columbia.

The other panel members were Professor Isabel Laird, assistant professor of psychology at Queen's University, and Mrs. J. E. Houck, of Brampton, Ont.

Miss Royce said unresolved ten-community service or paid employment, she said.

Miss Royce stressed that a mother's interests should not conflict with the interests of her children. Unless a mother is clear about her family duties, she will not do a good job either as a mother or as an employed worker, she said. However, a mother might be able to take a job without injuring her relationship with her family.

Mrs. Houck said a mother's devotion is misplaced if she is slavishly devoted to her family and has no outside interests.

A provincial Liberal candidate in 1955, Mrs. Houck criticized women for being "timid, falsely prudish," and not entering fields they consider belong to men.

Dr. F. T. Fahey, Member of Parliament in the federal government and now running for re-election as a Liberal candidate in Victoria riding, Mrs. Fahey, Mrs. R. W. Mayhew and Alastair Fraser, Liberal candidate in the Saanich-Esquimalt riding, are seen, centre foreground, with a few of the many guests who attended a garden party at the Beach Drive home of the Hon. R. W. Mayhew and Mrs. Mayhew, yesterday afternoon. The party was arranged by the host and hostess to honor Dr. Fahey and Mr. Fraser.

Is Colored Linen Too Bold for Formal Dinner?

Must table linen for a formal dinner be white or off-white, or can there be colors, either bright or pastel? Are place mats used for formal dinners?

Louise Davis Answers

The color of linen for a formal dinner is a matter of opinion and personal choice. I am one who thinks that a table can be exquisite with, for example, a Louise Davis bright green cloth and napkins, providing the entire picture is pleasing and artistic. I'm sure that even the most meticulous and conservative guests wouldn't frown upon color, especially if the hostess can achieve elegance without being gaudy. One should give considerable thought in planning a table for a formal dinner.

The china pattern, glassware and centrepiece would have to be just right in relation to each other. The decor of the surroundings should also be given consideration. A dinner table can be a work of art. There are gradations of formal table settings, some ultra-orthodox not too ultra, yet still formal. Linen in white or off-white is always safe. Even if it is a must for some, that shouldn't influence others who would like to go in for color.

Place mats can also be used for an "almost formal" dinner. Here, too, the same thought should be given to achieve a beautiful result. However, the trend at the moment seems to be in favor of the tablecloth.

Grandmother's Silver Prayer Book Carried by Happy Bride

Richly brocaded ivory taffeta styled on simple classic lines created a bridal gown for Katharine Ann Burnett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Burnett, 2307 Musgrave Street, who exchanged marriage vows with Thomas Barton Howes, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Howes, 2321 Cook Street, Saturday evening in St. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay.

Rev. H. J. Jones performed the ceremony in a setting of late spring flowers in bright multi-tones. Guest pews were marked with nosegays of yellow roses.

To complement her gown the bride chose a fingertip veil of ivory and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses in which was placed her maternal grandmother's silver prayer book. She was given in marriage by her father.

As maid of honor, Miss Susan V. Burnett wore a gown of violet blue nylon sheer over crisp white organdy, sprinkled with embossed flowers. She carried yellow carnations. Bridesmaid Miss Irene M. Burnett was gowned in white organdy embellished with yellow roses posed over apple green taffeta, and her bouquet was mauve carnations. Both gowns featured very full skirts.

Mr. Keith Littler was best man, and ushers were Mr. J. Campbell, Mr. W. McLean and A. Snowsell.

Yellow roses decorated Up-lands Golf Club for the reception, at which the newlyweds were assisted in receiving their guests by the bride's mother, wearing a cocoa-toned brocade sheath gown, and the groom's mother, in a gown of smoke blue lace.

R. Hawkes proposed the toast to the bride, and the young couple cut a wedding cake which had been decorated by

Birthday Meeting

Thirteenth anniversary of Victoria Red Cross Home Emergency Service, organized in May, 1944, took place at the home of Red Cross president Dr. Olga Jardine, 417 Queen Anne Heights, with a full attendance of workers and Mrs. Rosalind Coope and Mrs. Eileen Russell, supervisor and deputy supervisor, respectively. Mrs. W. Davenport, who recently succeeded Dr. Jardine as chairman of the service, directed the informal program, which concluded with the serving of the birthday cake. Featured incident of the evening was the presentation of the Red Cross pin to Mrs. Marie Schuring for completion of a year's highly satisfactory duty with the group. An expression of appreciation was extended to the hostess by Miss E. Bruce, a member of the founding committee.

Beck Jr. 'Guinea Pig' In Contempt Charge

WASHINGTON (UP)—Sen. John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) predicted today the Senate will make Dave Beck Jr. a guinea pig in a contempt of Congress test case for "frivolously and capriciously" invoking the fifth amendment.

Young Beck invoked the fifth amendment 130 times in 40 minutes Tuesday under questioning by the Senate rackets committee.

Committee chairman McClellan said the committee will act in about 10 days on a contempt recommendation against the 36-year-old son of the Teamsters' Union president.

The committee also ordered contempt proceedings against Joseph McEvoy, a nephew of the elder Beck by marriage. McEvoy, the alleged bodyguard of the six-foot, 200-pound Beck Jr., invoked the fifth 90 times. Both men refused to answer nearly all questions put to them by the committee, including their connection with the Teamsters' Union and its payroll.

"I don't think the Senate will hesitate 30 minutes" in approving the citation against Beck, McClellan said.

TRADE WITH RED CHINA INEVITABLE SAYS IKE

WASHINGTON (CP)—President Eisenhower said today he does not see as much advantage as some persons do in maintaining different trade embargoes for Russia and Communist China.

He told a press conference he believes that in the long run trading with "Peiping" cannot be stopped. If it was not organized, it would be clandestine trade.

He thus indicated, without saying so definitely, that he might favor putting trade with China on the same basis as Russia.

Election Race In Exciting Home Stretch

(From Times' News Services)

Political leaders and followers of all party stripes and colors are charging down the home stretch in the election race with the finishing line, the polling booths, next Monday, only five days away and the purse, control of Canada's government.

Here is how the running looked today:

'NO ORDERS'—ST. LAURENT

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent launched today an extensive address on Canada's history and economic future, the need for land reform and military strength.

Mr. Diefenbaker, he said, had described himself as a pessimist. He was being aided in his Ontario campaign by Premier Frost. But a booklet issued by the Frost government had tended to support the Liberal party's contention that Canada had prospered under a Liberal administration.

The booklet reviewing the 1956 economy said Canada had broken economic records. It was "a pretty good testimonial" to progress which had coincided with a Liberal administration, and that the Frost government in its booklet had stated the pipeline was a good thing for Ontario.

Mr. St. Laurent said he had invited—not ordered—service men to vote for the Liberals. He had read of Mr. Diefenbaker's statements with "great horror." He had done no wrong.

"To have anyone say that the letter amounted to ordering the armed forces to vote Liberal must be quite as repugnant to the members of the armed forces as it would be to any other citizen," Mr. St. Laurent said.

The prime minister winds up his Ontario tour with a monster rally in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Friday evening.

Mr. St. Laurent spoke at Brockville before an outdoor crowd of more than 400 at noon. At the night rally in St. Catharines where a crowd of about 1,000 filled the high

PLANS EXPLAINED
Year-Round Service To Port Angeles

Plans covering a combination passenger and roll-on, roll-off freight vessel to operate between Victoria and Port Angeles are now in the hands of the U.S. Maritime Commission, R. J. Acheson, president of Black Ball Transport Inc., Seattle, said today.

He said immediate approval of the plans would allow construction in time to commence service in the summer of 1958. The company president said financing of the project has been arranged with the help of C. S. Cumins, of Clise & Cumins, Inc., Seattle brokers.

In addition to approval of the Maritime Commission, terminal arrangements at Victoria and Port Angeles will have to be made before service can start, Mr. Acheson said.

The 325-foot ferry would be designed to carry 1,000 passengers and 125 automobiles, and would remain on the Victoria-Port Angeles run on a year-round basis.

Mr. Acheson said the new vessel will make a minimum of one round trip a day between Port Angeles and Victoria during winter months, with four or more trips daily during the tourist season.

In addition to the cross-strait passenger and automobile service, the ship will handle freight between Seattle, Port Townsend, Port Angeles and Victoria. Black Ball's present freight vessel, the Ironclad, would also continue in service between those ports.

Philip F. Spaulding and Associates furnished the architectural plans for the new vessel which is scheduled to be constructed at Puget Sound Bridge and Dredging Co.

Lumber Operators Accept 'Truce'

The 157 lumber industry operators on the British Columbia coast announced today they have accepted recommendation of conciliation board chairman Gordon Wismer, Q.C., that the current contract be extended to September 30 with the 32,000-member International Woodworkers of America.

Announcement was made through Forest and Industrial Relations spokesman, John Billings.

The present contract expires June 14. The union has recommended rejection of the conciliation board report and the four-month "truce."

Woodworkers have voted to take a strike vote on the question of a 20 per cent wage increase and other benefits.

GIVE RELIEF
"Continuing a contract made in much better times and which was considered fair then, would give this hard-pressed industry some relief from uncertainty, with consequent benefit to everyone concerned," said Billings.

"However, the board has seen fit to recommend a wait and see period, and the operators after examining all these circumstances, have decided to accept this recommendation."

"While the board recommendations are not all that the operators would like, they are recognized as a sincere effort to prevent bad conditions from becoming worse."

"In the interests of industrial peace as against industrial chaos, in the province's peak payroll industry, the need is

$140,000 Top Prize To Vancouver Man

Irish immigrant, Mrs. Kathleen Bones of 1762 Carrick Road, Victoria, won $2,100 today in the Irish sweepstake on England's Epsom Derby.

Top prize of $140,000 went to R. A. Cleator, Vancouver, who held a ticket on the winning horse Crepello.

With consolation prizes not yet calculated it is estimated that British Columbians won a total of at least $300,000 in the Irish Sweep.

Mrs. Bones was one of three Victorians to win prizes. The others are 19-year-olds—Leslie Lowres of West Saanich Road, Keating, and Flo Peacock of 3965 Rainbow, Victoria—who shared the same ticket.

All three rose early and listened with bated breath to a radio commentary on the race, broadcast at 7 a.m. Victoria time.

For a few seconds after the classic started, Mrs. Bones' horse Mystic Prince was among the leaders—and if it had finished first she would have won a top prize of $140,000.

The excitement was almost too much for me, dainty blue-eyed Mrs. Bones said. "All those big figures were dancing around in my head... and then as the race went on, and I listened to all that gabble of names, I realized that Mystic Prince had dropped way behind. "If I had won the top prize I might have taken a trip home," she said. "As it is, I think we shall use the $2,100 for household necessities, including a washing machine."

Hours of suspense followed the early morning race commentary for Leslie Lowres and Flo Peacock, two "close friends" who shared ticket NHV 26218 under the nom-de-plume "Lucky Us."

Their horse, Master Effort, was not mentioned in the race commentary and did not appear in the later results which were flashed over the wires from Epsom.

If their horse was a non-starter, they will receive a consolation prize of between $36 and $500.

Besides top winner Cleator, Mrs. Annie Hammond, 70-year-old widow, won $56,000 with her ticket on Ballymoss. Also holding a ticket on Ballymoss was Gunter Gahrns, one-time German paratrooper. His ticket was shared by another German immigrant, Werner Philp.

Two Ontario residents who held Irish sweepstakes tickets worth $140,000 on Crepello were Don Pearson, 21-year-old fibre mill employee from Pickering, Ont., and S. G. Farrow of Toronto.

IF TOTAL NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT
A-Bomb Test Ban Favored by Ike

(From AP and UP Dispatches)
WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower said today he would favor "a total and complete ban" on testing of atomic weapons if there could be total disarmament in the nuclear field.

The president also said that he doubted whether the United States ever again will explode one of the great hydrogen bombs for testing purposes.

At the same time, he said the U.S. will join in an international agreement to end atomic tests only if that is part of a safeguarded disarmament program to prevent the use of nuclear weapons in any future war.

In response to another question at his press conference, Eisenhower said he welcomes every indication, including the words of Soviet Communist leader Nikita Khrushchev, pointing to the possibility of achieving a first-step disarmament agreement.

He said he never rejects any such hopeful sign until it has been explored to the full.

At almost the same time, Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin told an international conference at Geneva that Russia is prepared to conclude a "general agreement on the whole problem of disarmament," as well as on any of its specific phases.

In an unprecedented personal message read on the opening day of the annual conference of the International Labor Organization, Bulganin repeated previous Russian demands for "peaceful collaboration and friendly relations" among all nations.

Eisenhower did not explain precisely what he meant in saying there probably would be no more tests of the great hydrogen bombs. He did not make clear where he would draw the line in bomb sizes.

Atomic Energy Commissioner Willard F. Libby told Congress today that nuclear bomb testing is "a small risk" that must be measured against "the risk of annihilation... if we surrendered the weapons." (See Page 2.)

At London the five-power disarmament conference broke up for a six-day recess without deciding on India's demand to enter the talks.

The request from India threatened a sudden East-West split, with Russia supporting it and Britain, France, Canada and the United States opposing it.

Diplomats believe U.S. delegate Harold E. Stassen would be ready to begin presenting the new "American First" step partial disarmament plan next Tuesday.

THE BALD BOY—CHAPTER THREE

Through the Hair Clinic Phase

By ELMER WHEELER
The hair tonic bottle and the comb—had become Elmer's phobia. My barber was giving me another one; he had a full head of hair. So I gave him up.

Then I decided maybe a visit to one of those advertised hair clinics would solve my problem. I picked out a leading one in town and sneaked into its second-floor office.

Those "before" and "after" ads really got me.

I told the man I wasn't worried much, but I'd been in the building and thought since I had a few minutes, I'd see what he had to say. Then I tried to pretend a lack of interest.

But his every movement interested me. I watched him like a country boy watches a watermelon grow.

He took toothpicks. Put on pieces of cotton. He parted my hair ever so carefully. I treated my hair with great care, almost kindness. He surely showed his appreciation of the hair I had left.

HE PUT the cotton under a microscope. He did many things that looked real scientific to me, sometimes nodding in approval, then again scowling as though he had discovered something with legs on it.

I tried to be bored about the whole thing, little knowing that a year from that day I'd be in

Pensioners Told To Reject Liberals

VANCOUVER (CP)—The executive of the Elder Citizens' Association of B.C., which claims to represent a majority of old age pensioners in the province, called on all recipients of the allowance Tuesday night to vote against the Liberals next Monday.

A resolution passed by the executive at a meeting in Vancouver said "elder citizens in the province and the rest of the country must bitterly resent the proposed $6 monthly pension increase."

The resolution added: "The sum is totally inadequate compared with the present cost of living even for the barest necessities of existence."

It claimed that Immigration Minister Pickersgill had said Hungarian refugees needed a minimum of $3 a day, and held that this proved the Liberal government was aware of what was considered a minimum allowance, while continuing to pay old-age pensioners $40 monthly.

Attorney-General Bonner said Tuesday night Canada should put international aid to less prosperous countries on a "firm, business-like basis for the national and international good and sound diplomatic relations."

Mr. Bonner spoke at a Social Credit campaign meeting at Port Alberni, sharing the platform with Comox-Alberni candidate Ben Wright.

He criticized the Liberal trade and diplomatic policies and stated that during a recent tour of Manitoba he found that resentment of the farmers against the government's policies was being translated into support for Social Credit.

He admitted that Social Credit candidates in eastern Canada are going to have "heavy time of it," though he said there is increasing interest in the movement.

Defence Minister Campney said Tuesday night the federal government "does far better" for British Columbia than the Social Credit government.

Mr. Campney, addressing an election rally in Vancouver was critical of Social Credit posters which urge a "better deal" from Ottawa.

He said the federal government paid out in B.C. last year $80,000,000 more than Ottawa collected in the province. "Other parties talk and complain, but the Liberal party has done things—for this city and this province as well as for all Canada."

He cited subsidies to the province-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway, $2,500,000 to be spent for paving the Alaska Highway and $6,000,000 in aid for the Cassiar-Stewart Highway.

Hundreds of construction workers in the Port Alberni district will be unable to vote because they arrived after the federal election writ was issued April 13.

Upwards of 500 men employed on a pulp and paper mill construction project and at the Ash River hydro development will be ineligible to cast ballots June 10.

P. Leo Anderson, returning officer for Comox-Alberni, said there is no way the men can get the vote, unless they were registered in their home ridings and return there to vote. Most of the men reside in the Vancouver area.

Harold Hine, Social Credit candidate in Nanaimo riding, is doing his campaigning with his right ankle in a cast. He broke it when he fell while nailing a Social Credit campaign poster on a telephone pole during the weekend.

A telegram to Prime Minister St. Laurent urging the government to take immediate action on a low cost housing program in an effort to avert a strike of 30,000 coast woodworkers was sent Tuesday night by six Social Credit candidates on the lower mainland and Vancouver Island.

The telegram charged the Campaign meetings to night:

Dr. J. M. Thomas, CCF candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, at Mount Tolmie CCF Hall with Arthur Turner.

a real panic and would be openly inviting advice, help, succor.

Finally he stopped all the testing. Took off his lenses, wiped them professionally, and after a tantalizing time, coughed and said:

"Young man within a year you'll be as bald as I am."

Yipes—I hadn't noticed the guy was bald.

"That is," he went on, "unless you are smarter than I was and catch the trouble before it catches up with you."

I SIGNED UP for 12 treatments.

Week after week I'd sneak into his office, feeling like a bookkeeper who was afraid they'd soon catch up to his embezzling.

I now became a clinic addict. I kept it up for six months and everything was going fine, including my hair. At times hope came to me when he told me mine might be one of the cases that was curable by treatments, "expensive ones."

I became self-satisfied with myself. I was whipping baldness as I had whipped calories. I'd perhaps consent now to let the vet give my dog the haircut.

Up until now I just couldn't see myself standing by and watching the dog's long hair fall to the floor of the vet's place.

LIFE WAS really being good to me. I was smarter than most bald boys.

Then one night, in a bragging mood, I told the wife how I was doing something that would go down in history. I had solved the baldness problem.

"Seen the back of your head lately?" she asked.

I hadn't. She advised me I had better take a good look. I did. Wow! I had a hole in the back end of my hair.

A hole in my hair. I was so mad, I kicked the dog. He'd never get to that vet now.

U.S. NUCLEAR BLAST FIRED FROM BALLOON

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (AP)—The United States today exploded a baby nuclear device for the first time from a balloon 500 feet above Yucca Flat.

The explosion, touched off at 5:45 a.m., was barely discernible at Las Vegas, about 70 miles away.

The Atomic Energy Commission said officials at the control point 15 miles from the balloon saw a brief flash and several seconds later the usual mushroom appeared. It rose slowly to above 6,000 feet.

New Backing Claimed By Civil Servants

Officials of the B.C. Government Employees' Association denied today that their membership is "backing out" of a strike vote scheduled to take place within the next few weeks.

A. C. Bennett, assistant general secretary, told the Times from Vancouver that the situation was the reverse. The association has taken on 200 new members since the strike vote was decided upon May 24, he said.

The only defections have been five professional engineers in the provincial water rights branch, who felt the action was contrary to their ethics.

Mr. Bennett said he was conferring with the Professional Engineers' Society of B.C. to determine the position of the hundreds of other professional engineers in the government service.

"The general reaction (to the strike vote) throughout the service has been favorable," Mr. Bennett said.

"The whole thing has gone past the primary consideration of wages and become a matter of principle," he said. The government employees are most concerned about their treatment by the government and lack of bargaining rights.

Mr. Bennett estimates that the strike ballots will go in the mail to the association's close to 11,000 members by the end of next week. Another two weeks will be needed after that to have them returned and counted.

In the meantime, the association has written to Premier Bennett asking for a meeting with the cabinet, and this may come about next week after the federal election is over.

PRAYER FOR TODAY

O thou who art love itself, do Thou make pure our affection in the home, but keep us from loving father or mother, son or daughter, more than we love Thee. Preserve us from every form of idolatry and help us to worship Thee only; through Christ. Amen.

VANCOUVER — A young man who was drowned while skin diving Tuesday at Whytecliff Park in West Vancouver, was identified by police today as Donald Albert Cooper, 22, of Roberts Creek, B.C.

New Flooding 'Risk' or 'Annihilation' Threatens Three Nuclear Expert Asserts Midwest States

DALLAS (AP)—Swollen by weeks of rain, big Lake Texoma poured torrents of water down the wandering Red River today, threatening floods in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Army engineers said Texoma, which sits astride the Texas-Oklahoma border north of here, would crest at Denison, Tex., dam at 644 feet above sea level some time Thursday or Friday. The flood control pool is 640 feet and the reading Tuesday night was 642.

The engineers said they were releasing 95,000 cubic feet of water per second. Inflow was 105,000 cubic feet. The overflow, coupled with severe thunderstorms predicted for the lower Red River valley today, threatened additional floodings as far as Fulton, Ark., on the lower Red.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Atomic energy commissioner Willard F. Libby told Congress today that nuclear bomb testing is a "small risk" that must be measured against "the risk of annihilation . . . if we surrendered the weapons."

Libby's testimony was prepared for a Senate-House of Representatives atomic energy sub-committee which seeks to determine the effects of radiation and fallout.

Other scientists have testified that excessive man-made radiation can cause persons now on earth to develop cancers and do even more damage to generations yet unborn.

"It is not contended that there is no risk," said Libby, an atomic physicist of international reputation, but he contended that there are various risks in many human activities. He mentioned the 40,000 highway deaths annually in the United States, the risk of actual survival? Libby said that if a general war should develop, the "massive use" of nuclear weapons would cause widespread of cancer and leukemia but would produce abnormal-controlled risk, or would we prefer to run the risk of annihilation beyond which might result if we surrendered the weapons which are ing.

"Here our choice seems much clearer. Are we willing to take spread of cancer and leukemia this very small and rigidly controlled risk, or would we prefer to run the risk of annihilation beyond which might result if we surrendered the weapons which are ing."

Switch to Shell Premium with TCP* and restore lost power while you drive!

How can a gasoline bring back power your engine has lost? Only by overcoming the cause! You see, most engines lose power as a result of certain deposits which form on spark plugs and in combustion chambers. In fact, engineers agree that these deposits are the major cause of power loss in modern high compression engines. (Even a new engine can lose power within 3,000 miles.) But TCP in Shell Premium Gasoline neutralizes these deposits while you drive—brings back the power your engine has lost.
